

Reagan restates call for arms cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan renewed his call Thursday for a major reduction in U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

He promised to do "everything" he can to head off the danger of "very tragic global conflicts."

In a wide-ranging news conference, Reagan also said Congress bears the burden for assuring a lasting economic recovery and minimized his part in any changes in Social Security.

The president, in an opening statement, offered a brief outline of the reasons and goals of the strategic arms limitation talks he wants to begin by the end of June. He said he hopes for a prompt reply from Moscow to his proposals.

Reagan said his goal is a "balanced, equal and verifiable" reduction of one-third in warheads and a cut in missiles below the level the United States currently has deployed.

His agenda calls for a cut back in the number of both atomic warheads and intercontinental missiles — "the most dangerous and most destabilizing" component of the nuclear triad — but he said it could be extended to cover all forms of weaponry.

"It will not be short or easy," Reagan said of the process to reach the agreement he wants, but he vowed his negotiators "will do everything we can."

Questioned about unemployment, now at a 40-year high, Reagan said, "Unemployment, tragically, is the last thing to recover" in a recession.

He said he had written 5,000 letters to businessmen seeking summer job opportunities, mainly for minority youths.

While insisting an economic upturn will begin in the second half of this year, Reagan said there will be "no real improvement" until interest rates decline.

The best way to soothe the fears of the money markets is for Congress "to prove" it is serious about cutting the deficit by passing "the right kind of budget," he said.

Reagan pointed to the spending blueprint approved by the Republican-dominated Senate Budget Committee as the kind of proof required — but he acknowledged the problems the proposal has created by calling for $40 billion in Social Security savings.

The president, facing reporters in the East Room of the White House, said he is open-minded about plans to remove Social Security from the overall budget, and said he would not stand in the way of a House GOP bid to eliminate the $40 billion Social Security saving.

But he stressed it is up to Congress to resolve that issue while meeting his basic budget goals.

On a long-range solution to the problems of the Social Security system, Reagan said there "could be some temporary ceiling" on the cost-of-living increases, but he vowed "those people now dependent on Social Security must not be deprived of their benefits."

Denouncing "demagoguery" and "terrorizing" of the elderly in the Social Security debate, Reagan said he will not take a stand on other possible juggling of the pension program before a presidential study commission reports at the end of this year.

Reagan ruled out any diversion from his economic policy, despite growing concerns the sagging economy could hurt Republicans at the polls this fall.

David Korsen of Twin Falls receives aid after he failed to negotiate a curve during a high-speed chase with police

High-speed chase injures suspect

TWIN FALLS — A high-speed chase involving a Twin Falls man, who had escaped from police during a search of his residence, ended in a one-car accident Thursday.

A Magic Valley Memorial Hospital spokesman said David William Korsen, who is believed to be in his late teens, was listed in serious condition, later in the day.

Sheriff's deputies said the accident occurred at about 10 a.m., when Korsen was unable to negotiate a curve at Washington Street, North and county road 4200 north. Korsen's car slid broadside into a rock retaining wall at the Snake River Canyon, became partially airborne and spun around 180 degrees, landing on its wheels, deputies said.

Korsen was taken by ambulance to the hospital. A spokesman for the ambulance, Twin Falls Emergency Medical Services, said Korsen had suffered facial cuts and bruises, and had complained of lower back pain.

Hospital officials would not elaborate on Korsen's condition, but they said he had not been placed in intensive care.

Twin Falls police Chief Tim Qualls said the chase stemmed from his department's investigation of a drug transaction that allegedly occurred at Korsen's residence, 314 Borah Ave.

W., earlier in the day. Korsen was involved in the drug transaction, Qualls said, but he declined to elaborate further on the investigation.

Twin Falls police and state narcotics agents later arrived at the residence with a search warrant. At about that time, Korsen escaped from the scene in a 1970 El Camino, turning north onto Washington. One police unit followed the car, which Qualls said was traveling at speeds of up to 100 mph.

No other injuries were reported. Charges are pending against Korsen, Qualls said.

Argentines ease demand of sovereignty

By United Press International

Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri, in what appeared to be a major concession, indicated Thursday he would not demand a guarantee of Argentine sovereignty over the Falkland Islands in advance of negotiations with Britain.

It was the first time Galtieri committed himself to such a position, negotiating position and follows four days of what Britain said were successful sorties against Argentine positions and jet attacks.

It was not clear if the possible change in Argentina's position reflected growing difficulties in maintaining its troops on the Falklands or a diplomatic breakthrough in peace talks at the United Nations.

But President Reagan, in an apparent reference to Galtieri's statements, declared, "There's been some breakthroughs that make it a little more hopeful."

He said Argentina's previous demand for "sovereignty before negotiations took place" "doesn't make much sense" but "I understand there's been some agreement on that."

Earlier, Britain's envoy brought "fresh instructions" from London to Secretary-General Javier Peraz de Cuellar who said "fundamental issues are being tackled" in the "crucial stage" of the 6-day-old negotiations.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher expressed renewed desire to end the five-week conflict, but promised Parliament she will never "sell out" the 1,800 English-speaking inhabitants of the Falklands.

British Defense Secretary John Nott warned the war fleet in the South Atlantic was ready "either to launch an immediate invasion or continue its siege of Argentine troops entrenched on its colony of 149 years."

"We will not be hurried — but we will not be stalled by Argentine procrastination," he said.

At least 10 bombs exploded at two branches of the Bank of Boston in a possible violent turn in growing anti-American feelings for Washington's economic blacklisting of Buenos Aires and military support of London.

Diplomatic sources also disclosed U.S. Ambassador-at-large Vernon Walters paid a secret visit to Argentina earlier this week.

Diplomats in Buenos Aires said Walters arrived Monday and left after what once official told the Argentine newspaper Clarin was an "unsuccessful" mission.

There were no reports of new fighting — for the first time in five days — but Britain updated its report of an air-and-sea battle Wednesday, saying it shot down three, not two, Argentine Skyhawk fighter jets that attacked and slightly damaged a British warship.

Argentina admitted the loss of two Skyhawks but said they inflicted "considerable damage" on two British frigates.

In Buenos Aires, Galtieri appeared to drop his demand for recognition of Argentine sovereignty over the Falklands as a condition for a cease-fire.

House Democrats finish budget blueprint

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Democratic-led House Budget Committee approved a $780.6 billion budget blueprint Thursday that would raise about $55 billion more in taxes and spend $25 billion less on defense than the Senate GOP plan.

President Reagan, in a nationally broadcast news conference late in the day, never mentioned that action but said he believes interest rates would fall if Congress passed the Senate GOP committee version, which is headed for floor debate in the next few days.

The president said he believes the recession is bottoming out and the best way to get interest rates down is to "pass that budget that has already been passed out of the Senate Budget Committee."

"I think there is a very good chance of that," he said. "The House committee alternative bill, proposed by Budget Committee Chairman James Jones, D-Okla., was approved 17-12, along party lines."

It would leave Social Security benefits intact, while the 1983 package approved by the Senate Budget Committee would require $10 billion of unspecified "savings" in the system over the next three years.

Reagan did not comment directly on that provision but edged back from his earlier firm support for the Senate language. The decision, he said, will be up to members of the House and Senate. "That's their job."

Senate, House budget proposals compared

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is a comparison of major items in the fiscal 1983 budget resolutions passed by the GOP-Senate Budget Committee last week and the Democratic House Budget Committee Thursday.

Defense: (Actual outlays: in 1983) House, $212.30 billion; Senate, $215.3 billion. (Budget Authority — money appropriated for next fiscal year but spent over several years) House, $242.95 billion; Senate, $251.7 billion. President Reagan had requested $221.30 billion in outlays and $263.35 billion in budget authority.

Non-military programs: House freezes spending at 1982 levels for three years, but adds $2 billion to such social programs as education, health and jobs training.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, told reporters the budget plan is "an excellent lot of work," and should "please our more conservative members" because it lowers the deficit.

But he acknowledged there will be a budget fight in the House.

Senate freezes spending at 1982 levels for three years.

Social Security: House orders Ways and Means Committee to consider separating Social Security from the federal budget; Senate orders $40 billion in unspecified "savings" — benefit cuts and/or tax increases — in Social Security over the next three years.

Taxes: House seeks to raise $145 billion in new revenue through unspecified means; Senate seeks to raise $95 billion in new revenue through unspecified means.

Projected 1983 deficit: House, $103.8 billion; Senate, $106 billion (assumes $6 billion in savings in Social Security).

"We mustn't assume it will be devoid of any amendments," he said, leaving to confer with House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass.

Jones said later he will consider changes in the budget blueprint, including a proposal to take the Social Security trust "fund out of the budget, if necessary to gather broad-based support, and will strive for "as large a coalition as possible."

Jones said he found the concept of taking Social Security out of the federal budget "attractive," but the committee staff is still reviewing technical problems.

Both Republicans and Democrats have sponsored such a plan, and House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois supports it. But O'Neill said earlier in the day he will oppose such a move until the presidential task force on Social Security makes its report in the fall.

Asked if there is a chance Reagan can bring off another budget-victory like he did last year, Assistant Democratic leader Thomas Foley of Washington said, "The landscape is different" this time around.

Liberal Democrats, led by Rep. David Obey of Wisconsin, also plan to offer a budget package. Obey voted for the Jones plan in committee but vowed to oppose it in the House.

"You simply don't lead with your bottom line," he said, calling the approach "like selling your soul to the devil before you've been tempted."

Obey noted the plan will be subject to compromises on the floor and later with the Senate version, and said: "We ought to be spelling out our fundamentals . . . (or) we're not going to end up in the middle."

Democrats fight notion to cross over in primary

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

Analysis

TWIN FALLS — Democratic leaders say they won't encourage party members to cross over into the Republican primary in order to elect weak GOP candidates.

But Second Congressional District candidate George Anthony of Filer, who is a Democrat, says he's still worried that a crossover by members of his party will "trivialize" his race against Richard Stallings of Rexburg. Both are trying to oppose Rep. George Hansen, a Republican.

"Last Saturday, the (Democratic) executive committee agreed to send out the word to legislative district chairmen not to vote in the Republican primary and to discourage others in their area from crossing over," Anthony says.

"We have to stop the notion that voting for Ralph Olmstead (a GOP gubernatorial candidate) would be getting the weaker candidate to run against Gov. (John) Evans," he says.

"But if the word isn't got out, there could be a significant crossover." There are basically three reasons why Idaho Democrats might switch and vote in the Republican primary: • To elect the weakest Republican candidates to better ensure the success of incumbent Democrats in the November general election.

• To make sure the most qualified Republican is elected, assuming that the Democratic candidate has no chance of winning.

• Lack of contested Democratic races, prompting party members to vote in the GOP primary simply to have some say in selecting the general election candidates.

Anthony fears that a Democratic crossover in the Second District would reduce the number of voters in the Democratic primary, eliminating those who would otherwise support him.

"I would be losing an enormous vote if there is a significant crossover," Anthony says. "As much as 30 percent of the voting Democrats could switch to the Republican primary."

He says that if too few Democrats vote in the primary, his race with Stallings will become just a name-identity contest with the issues forgotten.

Historically, Democrats have crossed over frequently to vote in recent GOP primaries, either to influence the results or because they had no major primary races of their own.

Many political observers say that a large crossover in 1980 resulted in Gov. Robert Smylie's defeat in the Republican primary to Don Samuelson. Samuelson did beat the Democratic candidate, however. Others claim the 1980 crossover was negligible, saying that Smylie had buried too many political bridges and had fallen into party disfavor.

Many Magic Valley Democrats have voted repeatedly in Republican primaries, acknowledges state Democratic Chairman Marie Hanzel of Butte. But she says the majority rarely involves a desire to elect weak

Solzhenitsyn nixes 'ceremony'

CAVENDISH, Va. (UPI) — Writing as one "patriot" to another, Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn told President Reagan he would be glad to meet with him for an "in-depth exchange of views" but not for just a ceremonial visit.

"I would be prepared to go for a substantive conversation with you, in a setting which would make an effective in-depth exchange of views possible, but not for a merely formal ceremony," he said in a May 3 letter to Reagan, published Thursday in the Rutland Herald.

"The life-span at my disposal does not leave any time for symbolic encounters," the Nobel prize-winning author said as he outlined his reasons for declining an invitation to a White House luncheon held Tuesday.

While the letter began and ended cordially, Solzhenitsyn left Reagan know he was "insulted" by news reports indicating Reagan was advised meeting with him would be "undesirable" because he had become "a symbol of an extreme Russian nationalist position."

Criminals meet their victims

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Judge William G. Callow figured out how many criminals repeated their crimes without batting an eye because they never saw the tragic results of their handiwork.

As a circuit judge in Waukesha, Callow conducted an unusual experiment he said resulted in a dramatic drop in repeat crimes, mainly theft and burglaries.

It involved forced restitution, agreed to in face-to-face meetings between nonviolent criminals and victims. Callow, now a state supreme court judge, wrote about the experiment in The Judges' Journal, a national publication.

During the three years the program was in effect, more than $180,000 was restored to victims, Callow said. Because the theft was treated as an involuntary loan, "10 percent interest was tacked on."

"Our records indicate that in almost every case where the victim-offender confrontation was used, the offenders were never charged with new crimes," he said.

Von Bulow lists $1 million

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Claus von Bulow's attorneys Thursday filed a list of more than $1 million in assets needed to keep the Danish jetsetter out of prison while he appeals his conviction of twice trying to kill his first wife.

Judge Thomas H. Needham told lawyers in his chambers not to comment on the list pending a May 21 hearing and gave the attorney general's office until April 21 to file its response.

Prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti said von Bulow would return to the red brick colonial courthouse May 21 to sign a recognizance voucher allowing him to remain free on $1 million bail during the appeal.

Plane crash kills seven

SEARCH, Ark. (UPI) — A military spokesman Thursday confirmed all seven crew members died in the crash of an Air Force transport plane that exploded like a macabre fireworks display and lit up the night sky for 15 miles.

The Air Force Thursday night identified six of the victims as Maj. Michael Kelly, 36, of Lakota, N.D.; Maj. Richard Henry, 37, of Springfield, Mass.; Maj. Albert Oldham, 42, of Oceanside, Calif.; Capt. Michael Clements, 34, of Lake City, Fla.; Second Lt. Robert Schuller, age not given, of Georgia; and Staff Sgt. Paul Lee, 27, of Monett, Mo.

The name of the seventh crew member was not released pending positive identification and notification of next of kin.

An Air Force spokesman said six of the crewmen were assigned to the 34th Tactical Airlift Training Group, a subordinate of 314th Tactical Airlift Wing at the Little Rock Air Force Base. Schuller was on temporary duty from the 158th Tactical Airlift Squadron in Savannah, Ga.

Little of the plane was left intact after it exploded "like a big shooting star" Wednesday night, cartwheeling to the ground and exploding again, sending "geysers" like rockets shooting into the air, one witness said.

Two policemen killed

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — Two plainclothes-policemen were shot to death as they tried to serve an arrest warrant inside a bank Thursday.

Authorities sought a suspect who was paralyzed in a police shooting two years ago.

Police issued an all points bulletin for Jackson Chambers Daniels Jr., 44, who was named on an arrest warrant for failure to appear in court April 28, to begin serving a 15-year sentence for a bank robbery.

A spokesman for the suburban police force said officers Dennis Doty, 35, and Phil Trust, 36, both 11-year veterans, were believed serving the warrant when they were killed about 9 a.m. PDT.

All Savers interest rate drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next interest rate offered for the tax-exempt "All Savers" certificate will go down to 9.87 percent, the second lowest figure since it was first offered in October, the government said Thursday.

The new rate will take effect Sunday. Until then the current 10.57 percent will be available, encouraging purchasers to act before the weekend.

The latest "All Savers" rate is the lowest since the 8.34 percent announced Nov. 25. But the certificate is still a popular investment.

Up to $1,000 in interest earned on the one-year certificate is excluded from taxes for individuals and up to $2,000 for couples filing joint tax returns, even if all certificates are in the name of one spouse.

Reagan

The key to continued recovery is to convince financiers "the government will stay the course" to cut back the growth of government spending.

The president also said he does not "see a place for the government" in bailing out Braniff Airways, or other firms that go bankrupt in the persistent recession; instead trying to create "a better business economy."

Reagan set the tone for his 10th news conference, his second held in prime television viewing time, by reviewing the arms talks plan unveiled at his alma mater, Eureka College in Illinois, on Sunday.

Living through four wars, Reagan said, "has convinced me that America's highest mission is to stand as a leader among the free nations in world peace."

In other news conference items:

Reagan refused to pledge that the United States would never be the first to use nuclear weapons, saying: "I don't think that any useful purpose is served in making such a declaration. Our strategic nuclear weapons unfortunately are the only balance or deterrent we have to the massive buildup of conventional arms the Soviet Union has [arrayed against Western Europe]. They have an overpowering force there."

GOP candidates, and Hanzel says an organized crossover won't occur May 25.

"Nearly everyone (of the Democrats) in my county crosses over in the primary," Hanzel says, half-joking, "because many times, there are no contested races in the Democratic primary."

"If you want to do any deciding at primary time, it has to be on the Republican ticket."

Anthony agrees that the Magic Valley's strong Republican population does result in low-interest Democratic crossover, but it was said at Saturday's meeting that there was no movement for such a crossover.

contest is the only statewide or congressional primary race for Democrats.

"I had heard a little talk about how we should cross over and maybe vote for Olmstead if he's the weaker candidate," Hanzel says. "But that talk hasn't amounted to anything in my opinion."

"There's also no way to know, at this time, whether Olmstead is a weaker candidate than (L.I. Gov.) Phil Batt."

"I wouldn't say an order went out from the executive committee not to cross over, but it was said at Saturday's meeting that there was no movement for such a crossover."

Hanzel says that his organization has discovered no Democratic move to cross over—and affect his—or Olmstead's chances for election.

"If there was some organized movement to cross over, we would have heard something by now," he says. "I don't believe it will happen, and it's really too late to start organizing one now."

Knife used in alleged assault attempt on the pope lies in the brief case it was hidden in

Security tightens around pope

FATIMA, Portugal (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, surrounded by tight security following an unsuccessful attack by a Catholic zealot, thanked the Virgin Mary Thursday for protecting him in another assassination attempt exactly one year ago.

The byonet-armed man who attacked the pope Wednesday night was identified as Juan Fernandez Krohn, 32, an ousted member of an order led by suspended Bishop Marcel Lefebvre, a longtime enemy of the Vatican hierarchy.

John Paul knelt in prayer in the little chapel at Fatima commemorating the legendary appearance of Mary on May 13, 1917. He began his prayers of thanks at the exact moment Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca attacked him on the same day last year in St. Peter's Square.

An estimated 1 million pilgrims stood under a brilliant sun in near-total silence as the pope prayed for 30 minutes on the second day of his four-day Portuguese visit.

Police made spot-checks of pilgrims entering the shrine's great square and beefed up security forces restricted movement of reporters near the altar, where the pope said mass.

Amid contradictory police accounts of the assault by Krohn on the pope, authorities held the 32-year-old Spaniard at Lisbon's judicial police headquarters for presentation to an inquiry tribunal today.

Appearing undisturbed by the unsuccessful assault Wednesday night, the pope met earlier with Portugal's bishops and visited with Carmelite Sister Lucia, 75, the only surviving member of the trio of stigmatized children who saw "the Virgin," according to church doctrine.

He also inaugurated the Pope Paul VI hostel for ill pilgrims. Archivists at the shrine said at least "550 extraordinary cures" have taken place at Fatima. John Paul later flew back to Lisbon, 91 miles to the south, to greet the diplomatic corps at Queluz Palace.

The pope asked Mary's help in stopping the British-Argentine fighting over the Falkland Islands and achieving "a just and harmonious solution."

Nuclear power will become 2nd-largest electricity source

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nuclear power, despite lingering problems with radioactive waste disposal, this year will become the second-largest source of electricity in the United States, the Energy Department predicts.

Citing recently released government figures, a nuclear industry group reported Thursday that U.S. nuclear power plants will generate a record 313 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity in 1982, a 15 percent increase over last year.

The report by the Atomic Industrial Forum, based on the government's "Short Term Energy Outlook," shows uranium fuel will surpass natural gas as the second-leading electricity source, behind coal.

The organization, which has taken the lead in advocating nuclear power in the wake of intense public debate after the 1979 Three Mile Island reactor accident, hailed the figures as evidence that uranium is the nation's "fast-growing energy source."

"It will continue to grow until, by the end of the decade, it will account for the electric supply of one in every five Americans," said forum President Carl Walski. "With oil prices once again on the rise, it is important that this country have reliable sources of alternate energy."

Commenting on the report, the director of a Ralph Nader-supported anti-nuclear group argued that nuclear power is supplying more of the nation's energy needs because conservation and the slumping economy have significantly reduced the growth in overall energy demand.

"The pie has shrunk. What's not reflected in those statistics is that energy conservation has cut back on demand," said Anna Gyorgy of the Public Citizens' Critical Mass Energy Project.

She called the figures "a last gasp of a dying nuclear industry," and charged it is "not only unsafe, but expensive."

The major criticism directed at nuclear power stems from the lack of a system for permanent disposal of waste produced by commercial reactors.

Since waste remains radioactive for 250,000 years, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is in the midst of a legal battle that may soon reach the Supreme Court, focusing on its method for calculating the environmental impact of atomic waste.

The Energy Department figures on electricity sources also show:

• Coal will provide 34.3 percent of the nation's electricity this year, up from 32.4 percent in 1981 and 30.6 percent in 1980.

• Nuclear power will supply 13.4 percent, up from 11.9 percent last year and 11 percent in 1980.

• Natural gas will account for 13.1 percent of electricity, down from 15 percent in 1981 and 15.1 percent in 1980.

• Hydroelectric power will provide 11.8 percent, up slightly from 11.4 percent last year, but down from 12.1 percent in 1980.

• Oil will provide 7.1 percent of electricity, down from 9 percent in 1981 and 10.8 percent in 1980.

Wallace plans to run again

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Former segregationist George Wallace will announce May 22 his candidacy for an unprecedented fourth term as Alabama governor, this time with black support.

The 62-year-old Wallace confirmed Thursday the announcement would come at a barbecue in Montgomery.

He will be reentering politics just one week after the 10th anniversary of an assassination attempt that left him a wheelchair-bound cripple.

"I intend to run a vigorous campaign," Wallace said. "I've got the experience it takes to make a good governor and the polls indicate I have the backing around the state to win the election."

Wallace has actively courted the black vote while he has been on the political sidelines since leaving office in January, 1979.

U.S. retaliates against Poland expulsions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States suspended all jointly funded scientific exchange programs with Poland and expelled two Polish diplomats Thursday in retaliation for the expulsion of two American diplomats from Poland.

The State Department announced the action three days after Polish martial law authorities ordered the expulsion of cultural affairs officer J. Daniel Howard and scientific attaché John Zerhols, both attached to the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw.

The United States protested the expulsions and "manhandling" Monday of the two Americans and said further steps were being considered.

The steps announced Thursday were:

• Expulsion from the United States by May 17 of Polish science attaché Andrzej Korosiek and political officer Mariusz Wozniak. It was made clear this was in direct retaliation for the action against the two Americans and has nothing to do with any improper activities by the diplomats assigned to the Polish Embassy in Washington.

• Suspension until further notice of the U.S.-Polish program of scientific cooperation in agriculture, public health and energy through annual exchange visits by about 100 scientists from each country. New exchanges will be halted, but scientists already engaged in projects will be allowed to continue.

In January, President Reagan imposed trade sanctions against Poland and the Soviet Union and restricted exports of technology because of the crackdown on the Solidarity free trade movement with imposition of martial law in December.

Reports in the government-controlled Polish press repeatedly have accused visiting U.S. scientists of espionage.

In light of the attitude adopted by the Polish martial law regime toward these American visitors, we have found it necessary to suspend travel by participants in research projects until the matter can be carefully reviewed and the Polish government's attitude clarified," said the State Department announcement.

Keep politics out of parole system

The news that convicted murderer Danny Williams has been charged with homicide again, this time in Kansas, has prompted renewed resentment and anger, and no little political haymaking in Idaho, where his first victim, Melba Gray of Shoshone, lived.

No one can read the anguished letter of Ms. Gray's sister, Mable Kite, (Times-News, April 27), without feeling the deepest of compassion for this family marked indelibly by a senseless, awful crime.

When Williams came up for parole five years ago, family members and others urged the state parole board to keep him in prison.

Their pleas went unheeded. The parole was granted, without advance notice to the prosecutor, and Williams left the state. Now, with his arrest in Wichita, Kan., the wounds have been torn open again, and the Idaho parole board is again the target.

We have the deepest sympathy for both victims' families. But to condemn the state parole board is to miss the point. Attorney-general candidate Jim Harris, for example, has proposed a dramatic change in the parole system, under which parole-board decisions could be appealed to the governor's office.

That, we think, would re-inject politics into a process that should be free of political whim.

Idaho citizens decided years ago to remove politics from the parole process when they approved a constitutional amendment to restructure the parole board and give it essentially, independent review power.

The theory then, as now, is that a prisoner's parole should be based on the nature of the crime committed and the threat posed to society by his release, but not on politics.

Unless we as a society are willing to pay a huge bill for increasingly crowded prisons, parole will remain as much a part of the criminal-justice system as arrest, trial and incarceration.

No parole board can be expected to have a perfect record. The science of criminology is not that exact.

The record of the Idaho parole board is generally a reasonably good one. It considers several hundred parole requests a year, and grants about 200. The figures vary depending on how one counts, but most paroloes lead crime-free lives.

A few, unfortunately, do not. A Danny Williams may be the exception, but he is not the rule.

Parole practices and procedures need constant examination, and we would like to see, for example, a mechanism for greater input from prosecutors when paroloes are considered. Measures like these should help narrow the odds against mistakes.

But to return to a less satisfactory, overall approach by returning parole to politics seems to us an overreaction.

City should be promoting jobs

It is interesting that City Council and city staff are "fed up" with charges that they are anti-business. As in any dispute, there are always two sides to the issue, but even a cursory examination of the record is revealing.

1. Recently, City Council denied an application for rezoning which would have allowed the construction of a major regional shopping mall. Estimated construction and development costs were between $23 million and $27 million, and the developer pledged to spend that money in the community and hire local labor. The project also would have brought major new retailers into the area and provided over 100 new jobs.

2. Certainly, Idaho Frozen Foods can't be blamed for the problems which the city is having with its sewer facility. The city or its contractual agents designed and constructed the facility. The fact that it hasn't worked correctly is certainly not the fault of Idaho Frozen Foods. Instead of treating Idaho Frozen Foods as an adversary, it would seem that the city could do much more than it has to accommodate its largest employer.

3. It has been Mike Dolton, Deputy Mayor and the Chamber of Commerce who have attempted to find an occupant for the old Kellwood plant, and not City Council or its staff.

4. Present zoning laws, as applied by council, are oppressive to small business. Scott's Refrigeration, another major area employer, has been hampered for several years in trying to expand its business because of restrictive zoning requirements. A small business wishing to remodel or expand its facility is faced with requirements to install curbs, install curb and gutter, do landscaping, install fire-protection sprinkler systems, and meet so many requirements of the city that it is economically unfeasible for them to do so.

5. A small outdoor advertising business in Twin Falls has been severely restricted in its ability to do business because of the city's sign ordinance. That ordinance prohibits placing "off premises" signs on Blue Lakes Boulevard North, ostensibly to protect the beauty of Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Mayor Talkington suggests that criticism of the City Council emanates from the fact that economic conditions are causing business to lag. It would seem that a more productive attitude on the part of the city would be a recognition of the fact that the economy is affecting local business, and that the city should do whatever it can within its power to assist local businessmen in getting through these difficult times.

A city councilman suggests that friction between the city and the Chamber of Commerce began when Mike Dolton became chamber manager. Another reasonable suggestion is that the city's attitude toward local business has changed over the last several years, and that is what Mr. Dolton is reacting to.

Mr. Dolton is blamed for an inadequate historical perspective of local business. I have lived in this town for 13 years. In my observation, there is a vast difference between City Councils of old, which promoted urban redevelopment downtown and worked closely with the Chamber of Commerce and the present city government, which is so concerned with bureaucracy that it inhibits expansion of local business. This city would be better served if City Council and its staff spent more time promoting the creation of jobs and the local economy, and spent less time creating more ordinances that restrict local business.

Judge Bruce is not 'beholden'

It has been my privilege to work with Judge Bruce for four years as a member of the Juvenile Court Conference Committee. He and other concerned men involved in juvenile cases set up this committee, which gives juvenile offenders the choice, once, of going through the committee or the regular court. If they go through the committee, they have no police record. Consequently, many college students and high-school students, who made one mistake, are now well on their way to being responsible adults with no police records.

Having worked closely with Judge Bruce, I've found him to be a very intellectually astute and compassionate man with a feeling for the man on the street. However, Judge Bruce is a strong disciplinarian. A trait I find very commendable as a former teacher.

One strong point in his favor is that he comes to the community with no special ties, and is not beholden to anyone. This should ensure him of treating one and all alike.

Fortunately, the race for judge of the Fifth District is non-partisan. Anyone can vote their conscience and forget about party lines.

Judge Bruce and his wife are a decided asset to our community.

I firmly endorse Judge Bruce to continue in his present position.

Peace Day — A time overdue

We are often reminded of the days we have set aside to recognize certain figures and dates, or to recognize certain groups or celebrate certain causes. Many times it is done by those with a vested interest that might have little to do with the spirit of the occasion.

Well, I'd like to remind us of a day in which we all have a vested interest; a day whose time is long overdue. A day like so many of those we recognize that should be celebrated all year long. It is a day whose spirit was the philosophy of Christ and of Francis of Assisi, and of all the true leaders of every race and religion. May 18 — It is Peace Day.

Peace Day, it's a special opportunity for us all to participate in the healing of our planet. An opportunity to make straight our relationships with each other, person to person, nation to nation, man to the Earth. It is a day we can do something positive to change the course of our planet. It may be as simple yet powerful as a prayer. It may be the healing of an old prejudice, living the truth of our religions more closely, talking and thinking peace. It is a day which affords both politician and preacher a special opportunity to provide real leadership; to call upon us to heed the message of love and respect. Peace Day, it should be a day of power, not of power money; of love — true, honest, heartfelt — to get at the roots of our problems, to call for truth and justice — not expediency.

Peace Day — give it your attention — It is the ultimate challenge.

Fay backs quality education

Gary Fay's recent chairmanship of the curriculum study committee and the resultant report reflect his views and the direction he sees for our Twin Falls school system.

Having read the report, I strongly agree with the increased emphasis on education and quality learning time. I have been very pleased with the education my children have been receiving and look forward to the changes proposed by the curriculum study committee.

As a member of the school board, Gary Fay will promote the recommendations made by the committee he chairs and continue to represent quality education.

Government should heal itself

The turmoil created by Secretary of Agriculture John Block's revelations regarding the tons of dairy products held in storage under the price-support program will eventually reach the halls of Congress. However, before that priceless collection of money-grubbers starts belching hot air and saving the nation, let's look at some of the squandering by that dispenser of fiscal medicine. They ought to heed that old admonition: Physician heal thyself.

Let me quote from information coming from the office of Congressman (James) Collins of Texas. In 1973, the House employed 368 staff members and 570 investigators. Today, 761 and 1,063 are trampling each other. The Bureau of Fisheries had a staff of 22 persons; today, it has 82. A committee on banking and urban affairs had 46; today, 96 and doing but 33 percent of the reports done in 1973.

Then, the House Rules Committee used six persons; today, 44. The affairs of the District of Columbia were handled by a staff of seven; now, grown to 41, doing the same duties. In 1973, they were allowed $6.8 million; now $40.3 million. The Department of Agriculture has quadrupled its staff in these 10 years, while farms have decreased by passing into the hands of big corporations, insurance companies and banking combines.

The public is aware of the "perquisites," special privileges, retirement benefits and outside incomes that Congress has voted themselves. What all this adds up to is a complete hypocrisy, with arms up to the shoulders in the U.S. Treasury.

What good does these preambles of Congressman Collins and myself do? The answer lies: Get yourself elected to office or appointed to a federal committee. Get on the receiving end.

Hinckley trial offers vivid example of life's mystery

BOSTON — It is a painful, intimate trial, more psychodrama than courtroom drama, one about the mind of a man than the assassination attempt of a president.

If the Von Bulow case was a family tragedy caricatured into a public soap opera, the John Hinckley Jr. case is a public drama refined into a family tragedy. This time the question isn't whether the defendant did it; the question is why he did it.

In the courtroom, they will argue the legal definition of sanity. The prosecution must portray him as an irresponsible spoiled brat who "felt ordinary work was beneath him." The defense must portray him as a man obsessed with delusions, unable to control his own behavior.

But in a larger world, we know that something went wrong with John Hinckley Jr. We want to know what it was, how it happened. What goes wrong with people? What distorts the thing we call the human personality?

Before the trial, it was easy to speculate. We knew about the "country club" parents, about their oil money and their move from Dallas to Denver. We knew about an older brother and sister who seemed to do everything right.

We could note the physical similarities between John Foster and Hinckley's mother as a young woman, draw the character similarities between Ronald Reagan and Hinckley's father, talk about the youngest son who just couldn't make it in an achieving family. We could form a glib psychobiology, wrap up a perverse human story in reasons and stash it in some distant corner, far away from us, from our families, our children.

But then, one after another — as if in some sad procession of the dearly beloved and bereaved — mother, sister and brother took the stand. Instead of clearing the psychological path that led to the Washington Hilton, they made it seem more subtle and true.

They checked in with their own memories. They bore witness to John's tragedy and their own helplessness. They, too, tried to track how the son who had made his father laugh at 12, faded into the loner who "managed to remove myself from the world."

In the most poignant moment of the whole trial, the mother, JoAnn Hinckley, explained, "John just seemed to be going downhill, downhill, downhill, downhill; and becoming more withdrawn and more antisocial . . . and so down on himself . . . we were just terribly worried about him, we didn't know what was wrong, but we knew something wasn't right."

In desperation, she finally followed the "plan" of a psychiatrist who had seen Hinckley only a dozen or so times, and against all her instincts, drove the son — "who looked so bad and so sad and so absolutely in total despair" — to the airport for a final good-bye.

By the end of the testimony, she seemed so much like any parent, devastated by a child's disintegration, shaken by self-doubt, still trying to understand. Did they give the boy too much or too little, hug him too close or push him away? Did they seek a psychiatrist too late, or accept his opinions too easily? What if they had not moved to Denver? What if they had not put him on that plane? What if? What if?

Bertrand Russell once wrote: "Psychoanalysis has terrified educated parents with the fear of the harm they may unwittingly do their children."

The trial hasn't explained her son's distorted life. It has intensified the mystery. It hasn't answered the questions; it has increased them.

But in a particular way, the very confusion of this psychodrama became a reality. It offered all of us a refresher course on how inexact our understanding of a human life really is.

Like all peoples, we devise myths to help know ourselves and our world: myths of religion and psychiatry, of chemistry and culture. There is truth in them. Yet none finally, fully, explains how a person becomes.

None solves the mystery of how a single one of us with our own uniqueness engages in our own family, our own environment, to become ourselves. None finally solves the mystery of why one child grows up and another breaks down.

In the courtroom finally there will be a decision about guilt and innocence. But in real life there is only the pathetic echo of JoAnn Hinckley's simple wish: "We wanted John to be self-supporting, to be a happy child, to stand on his own feet."

Ellen Goodman writes her column for the Boston Globe.

Idaho briefs

Evans lobbies California businesses

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans had to put his concern about the state's grim revenue picture in the back of his mind Thursday as he made another trip to California to drum up new business for Idaho. A gubernatorial spokesman said Evans planned to meet Thursday with officials from several computer and electronics firms in the Silicon Valley near San Francisco.

Following those discussions, the governor intended to meet in San Francisco with embassy officials from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Japan in an effort to convince those nations that they should expand trade with the Gem State, the spokesman said.

Rulings to boost irrigation costs: PUC

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission says irrigation pumping costs could skyrocket because of a recent state Supreme Court ruling and another court case expected to be decided later this year.

The court is considering a water-rights case that may lead to a rush of pump hookups and an increase in demand for electricity that could force Idaho Power Co. to build new power plants, PUC officials said Wednesday.

The costs of new plants would have to be paid by all irrigators rather than primarily by new pumpers because of a different Supreme Court ruling issued last month, said PUC President Perry Swisher.

That ruling struck down a $50-per-kilowatt surcharge on electric-heat hookups, saying the PUC could not discriminate between old and new utility customers.

"We see some problems," Swisher said. "If we have a fast ramp in the cost of serving the pumping class, some farms may disappear."

Judge won't delay White sentencing

BOISE (UPI) — Federal Judge Harold Ryan refused Thursday to postpone next week's scheduled sentencing for Gloria Ann White, convicted of harboring spy Christopher Boyce at her North Idaho summer home and helping him rob banks in three Western states.

A spokesman for Ryan said the judge was "reviewing a number of post-trial motions" filed with the court following a jury's determination on April 13 that Mrs. White, 42, Newport, Ore., helped Boyce hide from authorities after his escape from federal prison.

But the spokesman said Ryan had declined to postpone the Monday sentencing hearing as requested by defense attorneys. He added the judge may hear oral arguments during the hearing on several of the motions.

TMI study negotiations to begin soon

BOISE (UPI) — Negotiations for the transfer of the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor core to Idaho will begin soon.

But a final agreement on the research project is not expected to be reached for at least six months, a U.S. Department of Energy official said Thursday.

Earl Feinauer, senior nuclear engineer at the DOE's Idaho operations office, said a negotiating committee, consisting of representatives of the department and the owner of Three Mile Island, General Public Utilities, will be holding its first meeting in the near future.

Feinauer said the Northwest Interstate Compact on Low-Level Waste Management Committee that the department and utility already had reached an agreement in principle, which would allow the government to study the core as long as the utility has access to the results.

Feinauer said negotiations would take from six to nine months.

More endorsements for Olmstead

IDAHO FALLS (UPI) — Eight more Republican legislators and a former Idaho Senate president Thursday announced they were endorsing GOP gubernatorial candidate Ralph Olmstead of Twin Falls.

James Ellsworth, former state Senate president pro tem, joined Reps. Cornell Thomas and Raymond Parks of Blackfoot, Kurt Johnson of Teton, Batten and Martin of Teton, and Idaho Falls, Rich C. St. Anthony, John Sessions of Driggs and Robert Geddes of Preston in declaring they will work for Olmstead in his primary election battle against Lt. Gov. Phil Batt.

Double take on phone bills corrected

BOISE (UPI) — If you're confused because your May telephone bill looks just like the one you paid in April, don't panic.

Mountain Bell Telephone Co. officials said Thursday an error in the company's regional billing office at Salt Lake City, caused 22,000 customers in southern Idaho to receive their April bills a second time instead of the May bills.

"They call it a computer error, and I know that when a computer's doing things somebody's got to tell it to do it, so it must have been a clerical error," company spokesman Steve Guerber said.

Guerber said it apparently is the first time the company has experienced such an error, and the foul-up will cost the firm $4,000 in extra mailing costs alone.

He said the repeat bills were sent out Wednesday, adding that corrected bills would be mailed immediately to affected customers. If some people who received the erroneous bills pay them, the difference will be made up on next month's bills, Guerber said.

Statehouse will be quiet on Fridays

BOISE (UPI) — "Thank God it's Thursday" appears to be the new motto around the Idaho Statehouse.

Gallows humor such as that made the rounds in state offices after Gov. John Evans' ordered several thousand public employees to take off the next seven Fridays, beginning this week — and swallow a 20-percent pay cut — to help save Idaho $12.1 million and prevent a budget deficit.

Despite attempts to make light of the emergency spending cuts, the unusual silence expected in many state offices Friday underscored the plight facing workers who found out only this week they will lose a lot of pay through June 30, the end of fiscal year 1982.

Related stories — B1.3

"This is going to be devastating for the employees and their families, who have already suffered from the general economic situation," complained Greg Marchbanks, director of the Idaho Public Employees Association. Officials estimated 3,000 to 7,000 employees have been affected by imposition of the 32-hour work week, which was expected to save the $1.9 million. Other budget-cutting measures are to make up the rest of the projected revenue shortfall.

Skeleton crews were assigned to answer the telephones and perform essential tasks Friday — the first of the seven "vacation" days.

Officials in the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare say they'll be virtually closing down the agency's seven regional offices on Fridays until at least June 30.

They said only three employees — Region Chief Larry Coleman, a switchboard operator and an assistant — would man the department's office on Curtis Road in Boise Friday. Referrals will only be made on that day in emergency cases, the officials said.

Regional offices in McCall, Mountain Home, Glenns Ferry will shut down entirely on Fridays. Other offices will be staffed only by a skeleton crew, they said.

Marchbanks said many state employees were skeptical about the sudden cuts, which Evans said were necessary to conform to a state constitutional provision which says the general fund budget must be balanced by June 30, the end of fiscal year 1982.

The cuts apparently were required to avoid compounding problems which state officials fear will occur again next year due to the stagnant economy and a corresponding drop in state revenue.

State employees can do nothing but tighten their belts and complain, Marchbanks said.

Psychiatrist says Hinckley first stalked Reagan in 1980

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A psychiatrist testified Thursday that John W. Hinckley Jr. began stalking President Reagan in December 1980, but the murder of Beate John Lennon "stunned" him into temporarily dropping the idea.

Dr. William Carpenter Jr., who examined Hinckley two dozen times after his arrest for shooting Reagan, told a federal court jury that Hinckley was obsessed with the movie "Taxi Driver," in which an alienated cable tries to kill a presidential candidate.

The jury, convened for the 12th day of the trial, also heard several tape recordings, including two telephone calls to Miss Foster, and Hinckley's melancholy New Year's eve 1980 lament to the world in which he said, "I'm sad, depressed. . . Anything I might do in 1981 will be only for Jodie."

He also said, "I've been up to New Haven, Conn., where Miss Foster was in school many times not. . . stalking her really, but just looking after her."

Only a month earlier, after the presidential election, Carpenter said, Hinckley "lost interest" in stalking Carter and went to Washington. "He had in mind stalking President-elect Reagan," a seed that ultimately resulted in the March 30, 1981, shooting attack that left Reagan and three other men wounded.

But the death of his idol, Lennon, in early December 1980, temporarily "stunned him out of stalking President Reagan," Carpenter said.

Carpenter, a professor at the University of Maryland, is the first of a series of expert witnesses the defense plans to call in an effort to show that Hinckley was insane when he shot Reagan and the three others outside a Washington hotel.

The psychiatrist will be called back for more testimony Friday, when he will be asked his opinion about Hinckley's mental state.

Earlier, Hinckley sat glumly at the defense table while technicians played tape recordings of love songs to Miss Foster and two telephone conversations in which she begged him to leave her alone.

Carpenter said that after being rejected by Miss Foster, Hinckley felt "total failure" and "decided to stalk President Carter." He said he tracked Carter to a campaign stop in Dayton, Ohio, on Oct. 2, 1980, but felt "unable to carry out the act."

"In an effort to psyche himself up, as he put it, he left the guns in his room and decided to see how close he could get to him (Carter)," Carpenter said. Hinckley was photographed about six feet from Carter that day.

Penthouse wins libel case

COMPTON, Calif. (UPI) — A jury Thursday ruled Penthouse magazine did not libel Rancho La Costa in a 1975 article linking the resort to organized crime.

The seven-woman, five-man panel deliberated 15 days and pored over thousands of pages of testimony and more than 600 exhibits from the often bitter five-month trial before deciding the magazine did not libel the owners of the sprawling San Diego County resort.

Penthouse publisher Robert Guccione, who was named as a defendant in the suit and spent $6.5 million defending himself and his magazine, said he was "extremely pleased" with the verdict.

"To a great extent my confidence in the judicial system has been restored by this particular jury," he said. "I think this probably is the most significant libel case in a number of years. There was an awful lot at stake."

The March 1975 story, "La Costa — The $100-Million-Resort with a Criminal Clientele," asserted the country club complex was built with Mafia money funneled through the Teamsters union and was a hangout for mobsters.

Two of La Costa's owners, Allard Roen and Moe Dalitz, were earlier dropped as plaintiffs because they were declared public figures. Owners Irvin Molasky and Merv Adelson were ruled private figures and could have been entitled to damages if the jury had decided they were libeled.

Molasky, who spent millions of dollars pressing the suit, was shaken by the verdict.

"It hurts me deeply because I've always believed in ethics and morals," he said. "It took a lot of time and effort and money and health these seven years and then five months of trial. Many times we held on by our fingertips, but we held on."

Asked if the verdict confirmed that La Costa was linked to organized crime, Molasky shot back, "Absolutely not!"

Standing nearby, his wife, Susan, said bitterly, "That magazine prints nothing but lies."

Lowell Bergman and Jeff Gerth, who wrote the article as free-lance reporters, were dropped from the suit last year after apologizing to the resort owners.

Gerth, now a reporter for The New York Times in Washington, and Bergman, with ABC-TV, did not testify during the marathon trial.

The trial, which followed seven years of litigation, was often acrimonious, with La Costa attorney Louis Nizer and chief Penthouse attorney Roy Grutman shouting and insulting one another in court.

Superior Court Judge Kenneth Gale twice found Grutman in contempt.

Urban leader sees explosive cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Economic conditions worse than those that sparked the 1967 riots, coupled with official callousness, have created "every, very explosive" conditions in America's cities, National Urban Coalition leaders said Thursday.

"People are worried and scared about this summer," said Carl Holman, president of the coalition that organized during the 1960s riots to alleviate social and economic pressures in American cities.

"There is no doubt in my mind that cities are in a much worse state than they were in 1967," he said. "Most are at the end of what they can do to raise more revenue. And the problems of unemployment are disastrous."

Leaders of the civil rights coalition — at a news conference where they released a 97-page study on economic and social conditions in American cities — expressed alarm at the explosive urban atmosphere caused largely by unemployment, and especially in minority communities.

Holman said experts and local church, government and social leaders who compiled the statistics found state and local governments are unable to make up for federal cuts as envisioned in President Reagan's New Federalism.

"You look out there, for example, in the Sun Belt cities and you see the sun doesn't shine equally on poor people," said Holman. "That's why we oppose the New Federalism."

The study includes comparative tables on employment, income, race and crime for 30 cities, and shows rising unemployment, reduced incomes and soaring crime rates.

In Detroit, for example, unemployment jumped from 15 percent in February 1981 to 17.4 percent a year later, the report showed.

In urban areas, with 75 percent of the nation's population, the programs of the 1960s brought relief from increased crime and unemployment in the 1970s, the report said. Its statistics show the trend has reversed in the 1980s.

"Unemployment has reached its highest level since 1941," it said. "Over 10 million citizens are without jobs and only 40 percent are receiving unemployment benefits."

The number of people living under the "poverty level" is increasing by nearly 1.5 percent per year, and a majority of them live in the cities, the report said.

Garn defends tax break

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawmaker who fought for the controversial $75-a-day tax break Congress voted itself in December charged that the news media have exaggerated its benefits.

The extra deduction for income earned while Congress is in session would not have passed if it had been as lucrative as the media reported it, said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

"I think most of the furor is justified on the basis of how the press has reported this since January and continues to report it, which in 15 years in public office is the most lacking in fact and distorted," he said.

"I think it brings to question whether the public can believe what they hear on TV and read in the newspapers. So let me simply say that I would not have voted or supported what has been reported that we voted for."

Congress voted at the end of the 1981 session to allow its members to deduct up to $75 a day in living expenses from income earned for every day Congress is in session.

The deduction would have amounted to as much as $19,000 for some members last year, and the action touched off a public furor.

Garn said the full tax advantage is offset by limitations on deductions for interest on mortgage payments and related expenses if the flat $75 deduction is claimed.

"It precludes any other deductions whatsoever, despite the fact that it's been indicated over and over again that you can do both," he said.

"If anybody should feel the pain of income taxes, it is Congress. But to indicate that we would virtually pay no income taxes and all of the distortions that have been presented, I wouldn't vote for that."

Spain bows to anti-nuke group

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Spain's biggest energy concern, bowing to a Basque terrorist campaign of killings and bombings, Thursday halted construction on a $1.6 billion nuclear power plant.

Iberduero, one of Europe's major power companies, stopped at the site and relieved its engineering staff of 90 at the Lemonz plant near the Basque port city of Bilbao.

Iberduero said only heavily armed security guards will remain at the plant, which the ETA (Basque Land and Liberty) terror group has vowed will not be completed.

In the Basque town of Pamplona, two presumed ETA members blew themselves up when 30 pounds of explosives went off in the trunk of their car.

Police said the men may have been planning a new attack on Iberduero switching stations which ETA have increasingly sabotaged in recent weeks.

The shutdown of the $1.6 billion, 930-megawatt plant marked the first time terrorists have successfully forced work to stop at a nuclear plant.

The moratorium followed the killing last week of the plant's director — the second ETA assassination in a year of a top Lemonz official — and a vote by plant staff to down tools for fear of further ETA reprisals.

ETA sees Lemonz, the first nuclear power plant in the Basque country, as exploitation of the region in northern Spain. The far-left Marxist group has killed hundreds of people, mostly government or armed forces officials, over the last decade in its quest to turn the region into a separate state.

Iberduero declared a moratorium on construction at Lemonz which a spokesman said would last at least three months. He said the company would try to recruit 100 new staff, from abroad if need be.

Work at Lemonz ground to a virtual halt last year after the killing of a chief engineer and a tough ETA death threat campaign against construction workers.

ETA also placed bombs on the plant site in the first successful sabotage on a nuclear power station in Europe.

Graham ends Soviet tour

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Rev. Billy Graham ended a visit to the Soviet Union Thursday affirming that religious freedom thrives under communist rule and making a plea for a new beginning in relations between Moscow and Washington.

"I think there is a lot more freedom (of religion) here than has been given the impression in the States," Graham said, "because there are hundreds, thousands of churches open."

"In Great Britain they have a state church," he said. "In other countries you have state churches... here (in the Soviet Union) it is a free church, in the sense that it is not headed officially, as the Church of England is headed by the queen."

Before leaving Sheremetyevo Airport for Paris and London, he urged the two superpowers to work.

Guatemalan government won't deal with dissidents

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Armed leftists and Indian dissidents who seized the Brazilian Embassy offered Thursday to free their eight hostages, including the Brazilian ambassador, but the government refused to negotiate.

Police said they deactivated a powerful dynamite time bomb found in a stolen car parked near the embassy. No group immediately took responsibility for planting the explosive.

"We will release the hostages one by one," a guerrilla spokesman yelled over an embassy loudspeaker, before a plane flying overhead drowned what were apparently their demands.

Leftists left by the dissidents on the embassy grounds, however, have demanded the government pay local and foreign newspapers to publish their communiques accusing the army of massacring peasants. They demanded the ruling junta let them hold a news conference.

Junta member Col. Francisco Luis Gordillo, who made no comment on the demands, vowed Guatemalan officials "won't intervene" in negotiations with the leftist, armed with one pistol and several gasoline bombs.

Haig lauds Turkey as Soviet shield

ANKARA, Turkey (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig, beginning a four-day visit Thursday to the strategic Aegean, said Turkey is a vital member of NATO and an essential shield against Soviet expansion.

"This is for me, after earlier visits as a NATO commander, like coming home," Haig said at Esenboga Airport.

"Turkey has been and remains a valued, steadfast friend of my country and an irreplaceable member of our alliance," he said.

Haig's visit to Ankara last December was postponed by the military crackdown in Poland and he has been anxious to make the trip. He enjoys considerable popularity with the military leadership and often speaks in defense of its program to restore democracy to Turkey by 1983.

An special American commission is studying Turkey's requirements to modernize its aging arsenal. A senior official in Haig's party said the NATO partner was operating essentially with World War II and Korean War vintage planes and other equipment.

Washington imposed an arms embargo on Turkey in 1974 because it had an American-supplied military equipment in invading Cyprus. The embargo was lifted in 1979 by the Carter administration while Haig was commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Relations with Ankara have vastly improved since the military coup in September 1980. An estimated 1,000 people were dying in political violence each month and inflation was rampant before the takeover.

Haig's two-day visit is to underscore the importance of Turkey in the NATO alliance and its role in deterring Soviet expansion by its neighbor, the Soviet Union, toward the Middle East.

Begin calls end to cease-fire

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin declared the eight-month "cease-fire" on the Lebanese border "null and void" Thursday because of repeated Palestinian violations of the truce, Israel's state-run radio reported.

Opposition Labor Party leaders urged Begin to act with restraint to avoid a full-scale war in southern Lebanon.

"The terrorists," Begin told the bipartisan defense and foreign affairs committee of Knesset, have reneged the cease-fire null and void.

"Their interpretation of the cease-fire is that it permitted attacks against Israel to continue. This is intolerable for Israel," the state-run radio quoted Begin as saying.

Soviets launch space station crew

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union Thursday launched two 40-year-old cosmonauts into orbit to become the first crew of the new Salyut 7 space station.

The Soyuz-T-5 space capsule took Col. Anatoly Berezovoy and flight engineer Valentin Lebedev aloft at 4:30 a.m. MDT. Docking with the Salyut 7 laboratory was expected Friday.

It was Berezovoy's first space flight after 12 years in the cosmonaut program and Lebedev's second — he was awarded the title Hero of the Soviet Union for his first flight in 1973.

P&Z blasts commissioners' votes

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An angry Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission publicly chided the three county commissioners Thursday for making what zoning board members say are inconsistent and improper zoning decisions.

In two statements presented Thursday, the zoning board: • Defended its denial last month of the proposed Crystal Springs Estates subdivision on the basis of opposition voiced by the Idaho Fish and Game Department and the Filer School Board. The county commissioners later approved the project on appeal.

• Labeled as inaccurate the commissioners' statement that the zoning board had been inconsistent in denying the Crystal Springs project while approving other developments in the Snake River Canyon, such as the Thousand Waters subdivision. The two projects were quite different, the board said. For example, no one had opposed publicly the Thousand Waters project, whereas no one, other than the developers themselves, supported the Crystal Springs project, zoning board members said.

• Charged that the county commissioners themselves had been inconsistent in approving Crystal Springs after they already had indictated that conformance with highway-district specifications would be required for approval. "We were therefore discouraged and confused when the county commissioners approved the Crystal Springs project three months later after the developers refused to establish roads to highway-district standards," the statement said.

• Lashed out at the commissioners for reversing nine of 13 zoning board decisions appealed to the commissioners during the past 30 months. "We do not wish the issue to be who is right and who is wrong. Rather, our concern is the lack of faith and confidence the county commissioners have shown in the ability of the Planning and Zoning Commission to arrive at just decisions," the statement said. • Charged that by approving a February 1981 zoning appeal by Arrington Farms before the zoning board had reached a decision, the county commissioners had shown "a total disregard for the responsibilities of the Planning and Zoning Commission, and we consider it a mockery of our efforts."

The statements capped weeks of speculation concerning how the zoning board would respond to the county commission's April 21 decision to allow the 88-unit Crystal Springs development to be located approximately five miles north of Filer.

Some board members acknowledged they had considered resigning in the wake of that decision. Instead, they said they chose to issue a public protest with the county commission. Eight of the 11 zoning board members signed the statements.

The next move apparently will come from the county commissioners, and some zoning board members said their decision to remain on the board could depend on how the commissioners react.

"We've stated our case," said board member Ralph Jones of Filer. "We've put the ball in the commissioners' court. That's what we wanted to do."

None of the three commissioners were in the audience when the statements were read. Usually, at least one of the commissioners attends the monthly zoning board meetings. Commissioner Marvin Hempleman arrived minutes after the statements were read, saying he had just returned from a two-day trip and instantly had believed that the meeting was scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., rather than 7:30 p.m. Hempleman said he was not told in advance of the zoning board's planned protest.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover was attending a meeting in Castleford, and Commissioner Meri Leonard was attending a meeting in Boise, Hempleman said.

$7.3 million Cassia school budget set

By GLEN WARCHOL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Cassia County School District has approved a $7.3 million budget for the 1982-83 school year.

The budget represents a 5.9 percent increase over last year's $6.9 million budget, according to school board member Ralph Rasmussen. The projected budget includes the $420,000 override levy that will be on next Tuesday's ballot.

While instructional costs are projected to rise by about 6 percent, fixed charges for the district are predicted to increase by a full third, due mainly to an increase in the cost of employee insurance costs, Rasmussen said.

Earlier at Wednesday night's school board meeting, a delegation of parents from the Declo area discussed their concerns over the crowded conditions at the Declo Elementary School.

Cassia County, like many Magic Valley districts, is faced with increasing enrollments that are taxing existing buildings. An $8.75 million bond issue, part of which would have funded a $1.5 million, six- to eight-room expansion at Declo, was defeated by voters last month.

Superintendent Norman Hurst presented the board with some solutions to the problems at Declo. The options, Hurst said, are:

• Sixth grade could be moved to the junior-high school section of Declo Junior-Senior High School.

• Parents living near the elementary district boundary just east of Burley could be given a choice of sending their children to Declo Elementary or an elementary in Burley.

• Elementary boundaries could be changed in the View and Springdale areas to shift enrollment concentrations.

"A questionnaire will be sent to parents in the Declo-Burley boundary area to find out how many would be willing to send their children to Burley, Rasmussen said. If enough are interested and an informal arrangement can be made, the boundaries would remain unchanged, he said.

State budget crisis triggers CSI spending halt

TWIN FALLS — A shortage in expected state revenue has forced a freeze on non-essential spending at the College of Southern Idaho.

Ending classes last Friday, CSI just slipped under the wire before learning it would have to return approximately 3 percent of its state appropriation. Gov. John Evans ordered spending cuts throughout state government

Monday to cope with a projected $12 million budget deficit.

However, the deficit's effect on the CSI summer program is uncertain at this time, according to Karl Black, the CSI business manager.

"At this point, we are going to have to return approximately $70,000 of our state appropriation, and I am sure there will be some cutback in vocational," Black said. But he said that CSI's vocational department has yet to report officially on how badly it will be hurt by the deficit.

College President James Taylor ordered a freeze on all non-essential spending Monday, and Black said school administrators are waiting for further developments from the state before making any decisions on summer school or increased spending cuts.

The CSI faculty — paid on a nine-month salary schedule — will not be affected by the cutback measures, he said.

The $70,000 that CSI must return is from the college's $2.1 million state appropriation. CSI's total budget is $6.2 million.

Government, accounting experts face off

Background is main difference in GOP auditor's primary

By BRUCE HAMMOND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although the state auditor's race has not been a high-profile contest in the upcoming primary, the two GOP candidates say the job deserves more interest.

But the main difference between them — Sen. Dean Van Engelen of Burley and Noland Young of Boise — apparently comes down to background.

One is a state senator familiar with government's inner workings. The other is a long-time accountant versed in the technical aspects of auditing.

The sole Democratic candidate is six-term incumbent Joe Williams, and both Republicans say they are more concerned with opposing him than each other.

Each GOP candidate offered his qualifications and goals for the office during recent interviews with The Times-News:

Dean Van Engelen
"I'm not running against Young. I'm just telling people what potential I see in the office, and how I would like to change it."

"Presently, it's a bookkeeping office, whereas it should be a financial management office."
"A 32-year-old department store owner, Van Engelen says he still is challenged by his current role on the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee, but he sees the auditor's office as a place "with more access to the answers."

"On the joint committee, we kind of work in the dark, since we rely on the legislative staff to gather material and figures from the various agencies. The auditor has it all at his fingertips, which means he has a unique opportunity to be adviser to both the governor and the Legislature, while also formulating some direction."

Van Engelen cites the controversy that erupted this year when the Department of Law Enforcement fell $1.1 million short in its budget.

"The department started getting into trouble two years ago, by overspending and stacking up bills on their desks, and turning them into the auditor for payment a month or so later. That's when the auditor should have sent up the red flag, or at least told the governor one of the agencies was in trouble."

Changes Van Engelen envisions in the auditor's office include:

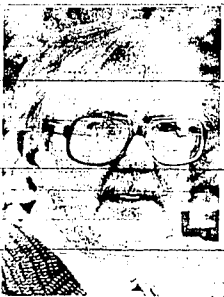

• Replacing the auditor's cash accounting system with an accrual system, which he says is more descriptive and already in use by most of the individual state agencies.

• Expanding data-processing services so "agencies don't have to moonlight and take their data processing elsewhere."

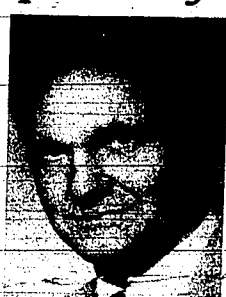

• Providing long-range projections of income and costs for social services so block grants can be secured "for only those programs we need or can afford."

• Preparing audit comparisons so the governor's staff has up-to-date financial data, needed to determine where to cut budgets during financial crisis such as the $12.1 million revenue shortage discovered this week.

Saturday Events

Shrine event provides parade

TWIN FALLS — Area residents will be treated to a parade at the conclusion of the Southern Idaho Shriners' annual gathering Saturday.

More than 600 Shriners of the El Korah Temple will hold their activities in Twin Falls this weekend, beginning with a 10 a.m. golf tournament today at the Jerome Country Club.

The parade, including 15 units of clowns, motorcycles and mounted patrols, will begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday after the conclusion of the Shriners' ceremonial initiation rituals at the College of Southern Idaho.

The parade will begin at the Lynwood Shopping Center and proceed south on Blue Lakes Boulevard to Five Points North, then south on Shoshone Street to Main Avenue, where it will turn west, ending at Sears at approximately 2:30 p.m. A reviewing stand will be located at the City Park.

The Shriners' activities will end with a banquet at the Holiday Inn. Dancing will follow, with bands at both the Canyon Springs Inn and the Holiday Inn.

Kiwanis slate recycling drive

TWIN FALLS — A newspaper and can-recycling drive will be held by the Kiwanis Club of Twin Falls this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., with the proceeds benefiting the city's parks.

Persons wishing to dispose of newspapers or aluminum cans may place them in bins at Harmon Park, Sears, or any of five grocery stores: Buttrick's, Albertson's, Smith's, Wamart and the Circle K stores at Washington Street and Eller Avenue. Persons who want their newspapers or cans picked up should call 733-9534 or 733-1941.

Optimists plan bicycle rodeo

TWIN FALLS — Two bicycles are among prizes that will be offered Saturday when the Optimist Club of Twin Falls sponsors a bicycle "rodeo" as part of the club's annual bicycle safety week.

Children are invited to ride their bicycles in a parade that will start at 9 a.m. from the downtown Sears store.

It will end at Harmon Park, where Optimist Club members will conduct bicycle-safety inspections and the Twin Falls Fire Department will sell 51 bicycle licenses.

After the inspections, children can participate in speed and obstacle-course races, with prizes awarded in various age categories. A boy's bicycle and a girl's bicycle, in addition to other prizes donated by Twin Falls merchants, will be awarded the winners of a drawing to be held after the races.

The day's activities will begin with the parade registration at 8:30 a.m. at Sears. The parade's theme is "Sports Heroes." Entrants are invited to costume themselves as their favorite sports star and to decorate their bicycles. Prizes will be awarded to the best-decorated boy and girl, and for the best-decorated boy's and girl's bicycles.

Zoning

Zoning board members had not made any public statements in advance of Thursday's session, although the presence of several reporters indicated the story had been leaked.

After reading the statements, Hempleman declined to let Crystal Springs' decision, citing the rights of the property owners.

"It is private property. The (developers) were the owners of the property. He has the right to do whatever he wants with it, as long as he isn't stepping on someone's toes," Hempleman said.

If the preservation of the recreation site is so important to Crystal Springs critics, "they should purchase the right of ways or buy the property," he said.

But Hempleman said he was surprised that so many zoning board decisions had been reversed on appeal.

"It didn't seem like it was that bad," he said.

The commissioners appoint the members to the zoning board. They also approve any changes to the county's zoning laws.

Theoretically, the commissioners could mandate their will by changing either the laws that the zoning board works with or by changing the membership of the zoning board itself.

Hempleman speculated that changes will be made. But he rejected any attempt to screen potential zoning board appointees on the basis of how much they agree with the county commission's views on zoning.

"I don't like to stack the board," he said.

Auditor

"And I think it can be done without costing anyone more than the present $3.7 million budget, the auditor now receives," he says. "The office employs about 100 people, which is certainly enough to handle these jobs."

As for his qualifications, Van Engelen stresses his six years in the Senate and his "acknowledged leadership" on the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee during budget-setting hearings.

"I know the ins and outs of state government — how to get things done cheaply and effectively," and for the most good for the people."

Noland Young

Also stressing that the auditor's office is improperly tilted to bookkeeping, Young believes it should be expanded into a financial forecasting and advising service for state government.

"I have no criticism of Dean Van Engelen," he says, noting their wives are childhood friends, "but I'm saying the auditor's office is a professional job which should be filled by a professional who understands and was educated in accounting."

"Not only did I have an accounting practice 27 years, I was involved in governmental accounting for 14 years, doing independent accounting for Bonneville County," says Taylor, 53, who owns five clothing stores.

Unlike Van Engelen, Young — who is staging his first political campaign — believes year-end auditing for state agencies should be returned to the auditor's office. That role was taken away by the Legislature years ago and given to the legislative auditor.

But, Young claims that having budget audits conducted by the legislative auditor, the governor's staff and the state auditor to a lesser degree, is too repetitive.

The Idaho Code calls for the auditor to have more responsibility in reporting, maintaining and guiding state fiscal affairs than the office now does.

He cites the recent revenue shortage resulting in the governor calling for statewide labor and spending cuts as one reason the state auditor should have a broader function.

The auditor's office should be forecasting budgets and income and could have seen these things coming," he says. "Certainly if anyone should have predicted the revenue shortfall it should have been the auditor."

"And the staff of 100 people is large enough to do that job."

"I see the auditor as an adviser. He should report to the governor and the Legislature on what's happening with the financial affairs of the state, and how they might proceed to meet budgets throughout the year."

Allen, the Legislature only meets a short time during the year and who else is better equipped to monitor the cash flow to see if it is meeting the budget."

Another priority of Young's is to serve "as a conservative" on the State Land Board — another duty of the auditor.

He grew up on a farm near Idaho Falls and am aware of land-use needs. I would look at individual parcels the state owns and decide whether they are best used for leasing, or if we'd be better off selling some of it to get it into the state tax base."

Despite cuts, most state offices still open

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The state Department of Health and Welfare offices in Twin Falls will be closed today, but most others will remain open despite cutbacks designed to trim an anticipated $12 million state deficit.

Gov. John Evans issued an order Monday directing departments that receive money from the state's general fund to begin four-day weeks and take corresponding salary cuts until the start of the new fiscal year, July 1.

Statewide health and welfare offices will close on Fridays, beginning this week. However, Rich Donovan, the regional services manager, said he would remain in the Twin Falls DHW office, at 677 Elmer Ave., today to answer questions and reschedule appointments.

Like other DHW employees, he will be paid on the basis of a 32-hour week.

Donovan said notices were mailed to those with appointments scheduled for Friday. A worker from social services and from mental-health services will remain on call on Fridays for emergencies.

Other state offices, for the most part, will remain open today, although some might not be open next Friday.

State highway crews, the state police, vocational rehabilitation and the Idaho Department of Employment are all funded through other accounts and will operate as usual.

The University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service receives federal, state and county funding, and employees will report for work today, said Blaine Linford, the district supervisor in Twin Falls.

Linford said the university still was trying to decide Thursday how to implement its portion of the cuts. Hourly cutbacks have not been ruled out, he said.

At the state Department of Agriculture, few activities will be affected because they are paid for through fees collected from the farmers, ranchers and businesses using the licensing, grading and inspection services.

Department Director Max Hanson said 85 percent of the Agriculture Department's budget comes from these "dedicated funds."

Hanson will have his pay cut, although he expects to continue working five-day weeks. Some planned out-of-state trips already have been canceled, he said, and he will review all plans for in-state travel to eliminate all but essential trips.

Potential wildlife-regulation violators should note that Idaho Fish and Game conservation officers won't be taking any Fridays off — or any other days.

The department is not affected by the shortage in state revenues, and it won't be cutting back in manhours over the next seven weeks.

"The governor has told our director (Jerry Conley) that Fish and Game won't be affected," said Bill Webb, the supervisor of the Jerome regional office.

Webb said that Fish and Game also operates from dedicated funds. General-fund dollars are not spent on Fish and Game operations. The department's budget is based entirely from revenues derived from the purchase of fish and game licenses and tags.

Bob Melnen, the deputy director of the state Department of Parks and Recreation, said no additional cuts in services are planned by that department.

Melenen said the department would attempt to maintain the hours posted at state parks by spreading its staff thinner and using seasonal employees to cover where possible.

Kimberly teachers request 9 percent increase in pay

By KATE LOPEZ
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — School board officials and the Kimberly Education Association met Wednesday night in the first negotiating session concerning the 1982-1983 school year.

In a brief presentation to the board, Lee Wilson, the chairman of the faculty-negotiating team, outlined a list of concerns voiced by the Kimberly teachers. Among them were a 9 percent cost-of-living increase, a provision for medical insurance for all dependents of individual teachers, a provision for one day of professional leave per year and limiting kindergarten classes to 20 children.

Presently, the district pays for medical insurance just for teachers at a cost of $75 per month. According to Superintendent George Powell, insurance for an entire family would cost $137 a month, almost doubling the present amount paid by the district.

"The family insurance plan alone would cost the district an additional $37,000," Powell said. "That's a lot of money."

According to Wilson, the cost-of-living increase and the family health plan rate high among the faculty, as did a day of professional leave.

"We would like to attend teaching workshops when possible," he said. "In other business, the board unanimously voted to terminate the services of the South Central District Health Department."

The health district recently informed the board that, starting next school year, a fee of $2.50 a student would be charged for the health services it previously performed free.

"A letter I just received from the district said the service fee had been increased to $3 a student, instead of the projected $2.50," Powell said. "However, the health district is willing to bear one-half of that cost. That means $1.50 per student. I think we can hire a nurse for less than that on an hourly basis."

FCC grants Christian Radio permit to buy its equipment

TWIN FALLS — Christian Radio of Magic Valley has been granted a construction permit or license, making it Idaho's first non-commercial Christian radio station.

George Paul, who was appointed executive director of the organization on May 3, said the permit was granted April 30, entailing one-and-a-half years of work and several thousand dollars of investment.

The permit means the Federal Communications Commission has granted Christian Radio permission to build a radio station and purchase broadcasting equipment, he said.

The studio, located at 111 Second St. W., across from the Twin Falls School District administration building, is about 90 percent complete. Paul said the station now is waiting for the installation of equipment. A transmitter has been purchased and will be located on Mount Harrison, south of Burley, by about July 1, he said.

An organized fund-raising campaign over all of southern Idaho is under way to help pay for necessary equipment. The station hopes to go on the air before the end of the year, according to Paul.

Fertilizer trailer burns near Burley

BURLEY — An open trailer containing chemical fertilizer caught fire west of Burley Wednesday evening.

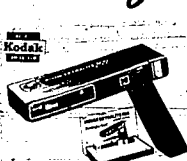

The unhooked steel trailer had been left for distribution at the Rocky Duncan farm, 200 South and 600 West, according to Burley fire Chief Russell Vaughn. The fertilizer ignited by spontaneous combustion and began to burn about 9:30 p.m., Vaughn said. An unidentified person from the farm alerted the department.

Officials were worried about the hazard created by the smoke, but there were strong winds that dispersed the fumes quickly, Vaughn said. No injuries were reported.

Firefighters remained at the scene for three hours until the blaze was out and the smoke was no longer hazardous.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Re your "Secretaries' Prayer": A secretary needs her rights more than she needs a prayer. I submit the enclosed for your consideration.

—Eve Berton, Cleveland
The Bill of Rights for Women Office Workers

1. The right to respect as women and as office workers.
2. The right to comprehensive, written job descriptions specifying the nature of all duties expected of the employee.
3. The right to detailed descriptions specifying compensation, terms, conditions and benefits of employment.
4. The right to compensation for overtime work and for work not included in our job descriptions.
5. The right to choose whether to do the personal work of employers (typing personal letters, serving coffee, running out for lunch).
6. The right to defined and regular salary reviews and cost-of-living increases.
7. The right to maternity benefits and to having pregnancy and other gynecological conditions treated as temporary medical disabilities.
8. The right to benefits equal to those of men in similar job categories.
9. The right to equal access to promotion opportunities and on-the-job training programs.
10. The right to choose one's lifestyle and to participate in on-the-job organizing or outside activities that do not detract from the execution of assigned tasks.
11. An end to discrimination on the basis of sex, age, race, marital status or parenthood.
12. The right to written and systematic grievance procedures. Signed ... "STOS"

DEAR ABBY: This is a "P.S." to the "Secretaries' Prayer":

"Let me be mindful that I could be out of a job overnight, with businesses failing and the economy in such a bind, let me look ahead and concentrate less on the everyday hang-ups and more on what the alternatives would be; let me thank my stars that I do have a job when others would do anything to trade places with me, and be grateful for the chance to 'type up three or four extra copies' for an 'inconsiderate' boss, while others are turning to soup kitchens; let me count my blessings and be thankful that I am NOT a statistic as yet!"

—GLAD TO BE WORKING IN MICHIGAN

DEAR ABBY: The Saturday before last Mother's Day (at 5 p.m.), my husband handed me a $50 bill and said, "I didn't know what to get you for Mother's Day, so here's the cash; get yourself whatever you want."

I felt so bad I could hardly hold back the tears. Why are some men so cruel?

—SENTIMENTAL

DEAR —SENTIMENTAL: Crude! Your husband would qualify for "Husband of the Year" in some homes. Your man may not have much imagination, but at least he remembered you. If you never have a more serious problem, you will indeed be a lucky lady.

Minico gains crown

Poky must win 2 for TF to advance

By CHRIS HAFT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Minico Spartans certainly don't lack a sense of variety.

In Tuesday's 6-1 triumph over Twin Falls, the Spartans settled matters early, scoring five runs during the first two innings.

Thursday afternoon, however, Minico saved its dominance for the final part of the game, scoring in each of the last four innings while holding Twin Falls hitless.

The result was a 9-4 victory for the Spartans, bringing them the Fourth District baseball championship and a berth in the state tournament at Boise next weekend.

Despite its defeat, Twin Falls has a chance to join Minico in the state competition as an at-large team. The Bruins, who finished 22-8, would gain the berth if Pocatello wins the Fifth District title.

However, Pocatello must defeat Highland twice, today and Saturday, to win its district. Should the Indians lose that journey, they would gain the berth on the strength of their better overall record.

Initially, the Bruins looked like a good bet to force a second game. After Todd Wington, left off Twin Falls' first inning with a towering home run, Brett Semple repeated the feat in the second. The Bruins added another run in the second, taking a 3-0 lead and furlowing Rick Baumann's brow.

"It was very varied," the coach of the 21-8 Spartans confessed. "My thoughts were going toward the next

Todd Wington connects for a homer in the 1st inning and Brett Semple (inset) is congratulated for his second-inning shot ballgame and saving kids (for that game)."

As it turned out, all Baumann had to save was a space on one of the team's vans for the championship trophy.

Twin Falls starter Steve Kravitz displayed his usual form over the first three innings, shutting out the Spartans while facing only two batters over the minimum.

But Kravitz' magic vanished over the next two innings. With Jeff Schow on second, Cliff Hanks on first and one out in the fourth, Dave Garro lined an 8-2 pitch down the right-field line for a double, scoring Schow — and, somewhat surprisingly, chasing Kravitz temporarily.

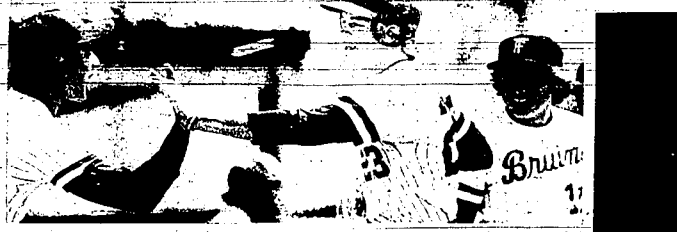

"Every time Kravitz has gotten in trouble with runners on base within the next two or three batters hit triples and doubles," Ingram said, explaining his decision. "So I went with the averages and tried (Victor) Valdez."

The averages betrayed Ingram and the Bruins. Valdez walked Brock Winnill on four pitches, then went 3-2 on Tracy Wodskow before the Spartan center fielder singled to drive in Hanks and Garro with the tying runs.

Kravitz re-entered and finished the fourth, but, contrary to a certain romantic song, it wasn't any better the second time around.

After the Bruins took a 4-3 lead on a fourth-inning unearned run, the Spartans had Schow on second and Terence Smith on third with one out in the fifth. Russ Wright singled through a drawn-in infield to re-tie the score, though Lance Sellers threw Schow out at the plate.

Wright, who advanced to second on Sellers' throw, scored on Hanks' single. Bruin left fielder Mike Federico's throw to the plate had Wright beat, but catcher Curt Thiemann couldn't hold on.

Like Wright, Hanks went to second on the throw home. He scored on Garro's single, the Spartans' third consecutive RBI hit and Garro's second. The Spartan hitters' limited success against Kravitz was officially a thing of the past.

"We were just going with the pitch," Garro said. "We weren't trying to pull the ball."

When asked if Kravitz was throwing at less than his usual effectiveness, Garro replied, "Not really. We were just ready for him."

We were looking all week toward him."

"I think he was throwing pretty well, but it's always been between the third and fifth innings that he's had trouble," Ingram said.

By contrast, Minico starter Cary Ferrin had no trouble after the third inning. Relying on a mixture of off-speed pitches, Ferrin no-hit the Bruins over the final five innings, retiring 15 of 18 batters and 11 of the 12 to complete his fourth straight game.

"We started reaching for the curve ball up front, and you can't do that," Ingram said.

outset.

"The tip-off on Cary is that he's got to get through his first couple of innings," Baumann said. "We had Terence warming up (during Minico's half of the fifth), and he always has been an ace out of the bullpen. He's kind of like Kent Tekulve down there — but I asked Terence if he was ready, and he wasn't, so I stayed with Cary."

Minico padded its lead with a run in the sixth and two more in the seventh on Hanks' home run over the center-field fence.

A tale of two race tracks

Thunder Bluff expects strong season; opens Saturday night

HOLLISTER — New lights, an enlarged pit area and plenty of racers will be some of the improvements Saturday night when Thunder Bluff Raceway starts a 13-event schedule.

Track owner Norm Jones has doubled the pit area since last year and has installed a new lighting system. The Southern Idaho Motor Car Racing Association expects about 50 different racers to compete in the five classes.

"A big season is planned," Jones said. "Every year we've progressed and things keep getting better. We expect to pull about 2,000 fans each race."

Jones didn't reveal how much money he's put into his facility, but said the pit area has been doubled to handle the number of racers and the lighting system, which is run from generators at the track, will make the track much brighter. Jones did say that he has some $200,000 invested in the track located about three miles east of Hollister.

Competition will be conducted in super stock, hobby class, mini class, bomber class and a women's class.

The hobby class is expected to have some close competition and a record number of entries.

"We've got close to 20 hobby racers, so there will probably be three heats with 20 cars each," said John Edgar, a spokesman for the association.

The super stock class will probably draw six entries with such familiar names as Chuck Geska of Buhl, Boyd Harms of Wendell, Greg Halbrook of Idaho Falls and Steve Fahrwald of Twin Falls.

Edgar said hobby stock regulations have been changed from last year to require two-barrel carburetors instead of four-barrels and 8- or 9-inch rims instead of 10-inch rims.

"The engine sizes can go to whatever the driver wants," Edgar explained, "but the two-barrel should make the competition closer."

The mini class is expected to draw five racers. The rules for the class have also been changed, allowing up to a 2,000 cc engine.

Edgar said the bomber class is the big unknown this season.

"We expect 20 to as many as 30 cars," he said. "A lot of people want to try it out. They have to put up an entry fee and pay $5 to get into the pits. The entire purse goes to the winner."

The bomber class will be the last race of the evening. The track is watered down to a soup and drivers can "bump" other drivers out of their way. The race, according to Edgar, is often a combination between a demolition derby and a regular race.

Jones has been working on grading the track surface this week and the lighting was checked out Wednesday night. "There's a little shadow in the third turn, but other than that it's been improved 100 percent," Edgar said.

Admission to the races will be $4 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 years and younger.

Eagles sweep Ricks

REXBURG — College of Southern Idaho rang down a 30-6 season Thursday by sweeping a double-header from Ricks College.

The Eagles, who have an alumni game slated at 4 p.m. Saturday as a final tuneup before meeting regional next week, collected three home runs in winning the opener 9-6 and then took the second 6-2.

In making it eight straight over the Vikings, CSI more than secured the host designation for the double-elimination regional slated at Frontier Field May 21-22. CSI will enter as the first-place team from the eastern division and go against the Oregon Community College runner-up, probably Lin-Benton, North Idaho, which needs one win in four games this weekend with Treasure Valley in Coeur d'Alene, is the probable eastern runner-up and will meet Umpqua in the first round.

CSI, down 2-1 on Mike Kappel's solo homer in the second, tied the first game with three runs in the fourth. CSI's first tally came when Mike Robbins doubled and scored on Sonny Pigg's sacrifice fly in the second inning.

In the fourth, Thompson led off with a homer and Rik McDonald and Robbins drew walks. After Pigg sacrifice them along, Mickey Lucero doubled in two runs. Two innings later, Pigg lived on an error and Lucero and Mike Barbagalata came up with back-to-back homers. Consecutive singles by Phil Brasse, Thompson and Robbins scored two more.

The teams were tied 2-2 after four innings of the second game before CSI started inching away. The deciding run scored in the fifth when Thompson walked, stole second and rode in on Lucero's double.

Lack of money, enthusiasm summons black flag at Minidoka

By MARY CLEMENS
Times-News sports editor

RUPERT — Lack of enthusiasm, lack of money and lack of a track promoter have all but black-flagged auto racing at Minidoka Speedway this summer.

For eight summers, men — and women — with a penchant for going fast have been chasing each other around the quarter-mile dirt oval. Unless the trend changes and somebody with a bankroll decides he wants to spend it, there won't be any races this summer at the county-owned facility.

"The members are just kinda burned out," said Linda Jones, ex-president of the Magic Valley Stock Car Racing Association. "We haven't had any new members for a couple of years, there aren't enough businesses who want to have the money it takes to race now days."

Jones, who just resigned her position, said the number of memberships in the association have dropped from a high of "175 or so" three years ago to 40 this year, with "about 10 members coming from Twin Falls." The Twin Falls members pay their annual dues of $15 just so they can race at Minidoka, leaving only about 30 members to work on putting together races.

Since the county owns the track, the association must handle the promotion efforts, upkeep of the track and other time-consuming details. Jones said there simply aren't enough members to handle those jobs while also trying to prepare and race a car.

"I don't want to have to worry about selling concessions and running the track and trying to race too," Jones said. "Taking care of the track and the promotion is the big bugaboo. It's always been a problem and this year it's gotten to be too much."

Allen Fairchild, who's been racing at the track each of the eight years, admits money and enthusiasm are the key factors, but he hasn't completely given up on the summer of '82.

"The local sponsors don't want to contribute right now and I think it's because of the economy," he said. "But if things pick up later on they've said they'll try and help get into the pits. It costs between $500 and $700 to stage a race at Minidoka with a $100 rental fee for each race going to the county. Sponsors, according to Jones, paid anywhere from $400 to $1,400 to sponsor races last summer. Some of the sponsors included Don Oviatt Chevrolet, Maxie's Pizza, Oasis Bar and Western Seed."

While sponsorship money is vital to success, a racer's own funds to get a car on the track are essential.

Virginia center must decide by Saturday

LA striving to obtain Sampson

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Lakers have intensified their attempts to get the first draft selection and a chance at luring Virginia junior center Ralph Sampson out of college. The Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The Times said the Lakers increased their offer to the San Diego Clippers in an attempt to arrange a deal that would assure them of the first selection in the June 29 college draft. The 7-4 Sampson has until Saturday midnight to inform the National Basketball Association whether he will join in pro next season or remain at Virginia for his final year of eligibility.

University of Virginia officials said the two-time national player of the year had given no indication whether he will renounce his final year of college eligibility and turn professional. A junior, met with Virginia

Coach Terry Holland Thursday to discuss the situation, but Holland said Sampson gave no hint about which way he is leaning.

The Lakers have had no direct contact with Sampson. The Times said, but General Manager Bill Sharman told the newspaper, "All the reports we get are that he's not coming out unless he comes to the Lakers. If that's the case, they (the Clippers) are, turning down an awful lot."

Sharman would not reveal specifics of the Lakers' latest offer to the Clippers except to say it involves "a lot of money, draft picks and other considerations."

Sharman said Wednesday he was not optimistic.

"They don't feel what we've offered is good enough. It doesn't look like we're going to get anything accomplished," he said. "Clippers General Manager Ted Podleski wasn't optimistic either."

"I told them what they would have to offer for any deal to be attractive to the Clippers and they were not interested," he said.

Sampson is a friend of Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and has indicated in the past that he would like to break into the NBA as a teammate of the former UCLA star.

At the same time, Sampson has never expressed any desire to play for San Diego. Virginia Sports Information Director Doug Elgin said he thinks Sampson might make his decision today, but another midnight verdict "is very possible."

Sampson turned down professional offers after each of his first two seasons. The Boston Celtics wooed him after his freshman year, but Sampson decided to remain at Virginia. Last year, the Detroit Pistons and Dallas Mavericks made overtures, but Sampson nixed the offers.

Jerome favored to win A-2 track today

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News Staff Writer

JEROME — The Jerome Tigers boys will grab the lead early today and simply move away from the rest of the field in the class A-2 Track and Field District Finals Friday.

For the first time in many years, the meet will be held as an entity, having previously joined with the A-1 meets at Bruni Stadium. The time around, Jerome will host district on its new all-weather track. But that's no consolation for Buhl and Wood River.

The Tiger boys simply have too much strength and depth for the other two and should handily claim the title.

The Jerome girls will have it about as easy as the top individuals and relay teams qualify for the state finals in Boise next week.

The meet kicks off with the girls 300-meter run at 9 a.m. Friday with the field events starting at 10 a.m. Running preliminaries, where needed, will be from 10:30 a.m. through 12:45 p.m.

The running finals will start at 2:30 p.m.

Jerome should come out of the boys 3,000- and field events with a huge margin. Robin Meln and Curt Fiege, followed by a couple of other Tigers, should go one-two in the distance. In the field events, sophomore Gary Hulsey should win both weights and the Tigers should do well in the pole vault and high jump.

Buhl's Dave Wagner could be the man to beat in distance jumping and he also will be a top contender in the high hurdles. The 300 intermediates will fall within range of Jerome's Zane Ostler.

Depending on what Jerome does with sophomore Jim Schwager, the Tigers could be favored in two of the three sprints, and Jerome could well come up with all four relay victories.

All of which is designed by Coach Tim Dunne to make another strong run for the state crown next week.

The girls' division has a promise of competition in the sprints where Wood River sophomore Lisa Bernhagen, now running on dry track but surrounded by snowdrift remnants, and Jerome's Vicki Winder will battle for the 100 and 200-meter titles. The 400 appears in the possession of Jerome sophomore Jon James.

Wood River could move front and center in the distances. Lori Pascoe will be favored in whatever she runs from the 800 on up.

Jerome, which could sweep the relays, will get more first-place points from Endi Schrammer in the hurdles.

In the field events, Winder appears untouchable in the long jump while in the high jump, Bernhagen, who doesn't like the Jerome approach, isn't, in a class by herself.

District meets Area A, B golf teams battle for 4 state spots

Two district golf champions will be crowned today and four teams will advance to the state playoffs.

Twin Falls, Burley and Minico will fight for the Class A district title at the Rupert Country Club while Jerome, Buhl and Filer will play for Class B honors at Buhl Country Club.

Under golf rules, the top half of the total field may advance to state. With each division having three, two receive berths from Magic Valley.

Twin Falls goes into the qualifying round with a pair of defending state champions. The Bruins won the team honors and Steve Meyerhoeffer was medalist.

The major battle usually rages between Twin Falls and Burley but the Spartans may get into the act because of the home course advantage.

The likely medalist candidates are Meyerhoeffer and David Coltrin of Twin Falls, Dave Parker and Shane Wall of Burley and Denny Seward of Minico.

Bruin Coach Al Rohwerder noted Meyerhoeffer and Rasmussen will be the only upperclassmen representing Twin Falls.

Two of the over 45 men representing Twin Falls.

"We qualified over 54 holes at three different courses. This week," he said, "it wound up with Meyerhoeffer first, Rasmussen second, (freshman) Jason Meyerhoeffer third, (sophomore) John Rasmussen fourth and (sophomore) Larry Waldron fifth."

Rohwerder said the district allows a team to play five men and use the four best scores, which he sees as a Bruin depth advantage. However, in state, the extra man latitude is eliminated.

The home course edge might also prove the difference in the B division where Buhl and Jerome have split eight meetings this season.

"They have the home course plus four seniors while we're going with two juniors and three freshmen so it doesn't look good for us from that standpoint," said Jerome Coach Dale Mowrer. "But we played 36 holes down there Tuesday so it won't be a strange course to us."

Phillies finally get above .500 mark

By United Press International

Season estimates figured Philadelphia to be an above-average team. Until Thursday night, however, the Phillies didn't look that way — statistically.

Then Dick Ruthven scattered six hits and Gary Matthews drove in three runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly, enabling the club to better the .500 mark for the first time this season with an 8-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Baseball

In pitching the Phillies to their 10th victory, their last 11 games, Ruthven, 34, shut-out the Giants on four hits after the second inning, when San Francisco scored its only run. It was Ruthven's second straight complete game victory in six days. Philadelphia is 16-15.

Matthews capped a three-run first inning off loser Alan Fowkes, 32, with his second homer of the season and added a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Reds 2, Pirates 1

At Pittsburgh, pinch hitter Rafael Landestoy doubled in the go-ahead run with one out in the ninth. Joe Price, 1-1, pitched one inning to earn the victory while Tom Hume earned his eighth save. Jason Thompson, returning from a minor leg injury, went 0-for-3 to snap his 17-game hitting streak.

Mets 4, Dodgers 2

At New York, Hubie Brooks delivered a pair of two-out, one-run singles to lead the Mets to their fourth straight victory and hand the Dodgers their fourth consecutive loss.

Cubs 5, Astros 0

At Houston, Allen Ripley and Lee Smith combined on a three-hit and Ripley added two hits and scored a run. Keith Moreland drove in two runs for the Cubs with a single and a sacrifice fly while Ripley, 1-0, pitched six strong innings in his first start of the year.

Expos 6, Padres 5 (11)

At Montreal, Warren Cromartie singled home Terry Francona from second base with one out in the 11th. Francona, hitting for winner Woodie Fryman, 2-0, bled to shallow center field. Tim Lincecum laid down a sacrifice bunt, and Cromartie singled to left to score Francona off loser Luis Delmonico, 2-1.

Cardinals 10, Braves 9

At Atlanta, Tim Lincecum, making only his second start of the year, hit his first major-league home run and added an RBI in the ninth. Joe Mauer, 1-0, pitched one inning to earn the victory while Tom Hume earned his eighth save. Jason Thompson, returning from a minor leg injury, went 0-for-3 to snap his 17-game

Rangers 4, Blue Jays 3

At Arlington, Texas, George Wright scored from third base on a throwing error by shortstop Alfredo Griffin with two out in the ninth inning to give Texas a win over Toronto. It was the second victory in the last 17 games for the Rangers.

Twins 2, Athletics 1

At Detroit, Jack Morris allowed six hits, three in the ninth inning, and Mike Ivie and Larry Herndon drove in two runs each to lift the Twins. Morris struck out seven in raising his record to 5-3. He lost his shutout with two out in the ninth, as rookie Kent Hrbek hit his 10th homer, extending his hitting streak to 23 games.

Royals 11, Red Sox 7

At Kansas City, Mo., the Royals and Only Concepcion drove in three runs each and Willie Wilson had four hits to lead the Royals, who scored six times in the first inning.

White Sox 10, Yankees 2

At Chicago, Lamar Hoyt, benefiting from a team season-high 20-hit attack, became the major-leagues' first seven-game winner and extended his winning streak to a club record 12 games. Hoyt pitched seven innings, allowing three runs for the White Sox, scored three runs and had three hits, including a homer.

Yankees 6, A's 4

At Oakland, Calif., rookie Steve Balbon hit a two-run homer in the first inning and added a double and a single in leading the Yankees over Oakland.

Sixers surge back; Lakers try for 3-0 lead

By United Press International

Who said the Philadelphia team was at a disadvantage and couldn't come up with a winning combination?

Bewitched by the Boston Celtics in the opening game of their NBA Eastern Conference playoff finals, and bothered by the 40-point loss, the Philadelphia Sixers fought back Wednesday night with the same tenacity that almost brought them the conference title last year.

The result was a 121-113 victory and a 1-1 tie in the series that resumes Saturday afternoon in Philadelphia.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Lakers can gain a commanding 3-0 lead over the Spurs tonight when their Western Conference series resumes in San Antonio.

Caldwell Jones' marvelous recovery of his scoring touch sparked the Sixers attack as he notched 22 points and grabbed 11 rebounds after being held without a point in the opening game.

"The Celtics don't look for me to score too many points," said Jones. "I play to keep the other guys honest so it opens up room for the other guys. It wasn't in the game plan that I would open it. I guess I could be called a designated hitter. I can score if I have to, but that's not really my role on this team."

Jones was loose for three consecutive soft jumpers that kept Boston at bay in the frenetic finish.

"It looked like it was Robert Parish (Celtics center) out there when Jones hit those three baskets," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch.

"There was supposed to be a switch, but the man who was supposed to switch didn't and that left Caldwell wide open."

The 76ers received some good news Thursday. Guard Lionel Hollins will resume play with the club and could possibly rejoin the team for Saturday's game.

Hollins, who has missed eight playoff games because of a broken finger on his left hand, had his hand placed in a small splint Thursday and will practice with the club today, Sixers spokesmen said.

Hollins sustained the injury April 23 at Atlanta.

Team doctor Michael Clancy will determine whether Hollins can play Saturday in game three of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference championship series, the spokesmen said.

The Lakers have been hot against San Antonio. In fact, they're the hottest team in the playoffs with six consecutive victories.

They beat Phoenix four straight in an opening playoff round.

The way the two series are going, Los Angeles may have another long wait before it begins the final march to the NBA title. It last won against Philadelphia in 1980-81, of course, there's a revenge motive lurking in the minds of the Lakers fans if Los Angeles plays Boston in the championship round. The teams last met for the title in 1963, with the Celtics taking the series 4-3 in a close 108-106 seventh game victory.

"We've won six in a row against two good teams," says Laker guard Norm Nixon.

"Anything is possible. Maybe we won't lose a game the rest of the way."

Magic Johnson says he doesn't know about a sweep, "but I'd be very surprised if we lose both games at San Antonio. We plan on winning both and ending it there."

Only one team in NBA history has won seven playoff games in a row — the 1969-70 Lakers. That team won the final three games of an NBA conference semifinal against Phoenix and four straight in the finals against Atlanta before losing the opener of the championship series with the New York Knicks.

"The team that wins the battle of the boards will win the game," says San Antonio coach Stan Albeck. "We're going to have to put our bodies on some people, clear out the inside and just beat them on the boards. If we can do that, I think we'll be right back in this series."

"Our main concerns are hitting the boards harder and getting George (Gervin) involved in the offense a lot sooner."

Los Angeles, however, can be unbeatable under the boards. The Lakers outrebounded the opposition 50 times during the regular season and won every one of those games.

Sports briefs

CSI's Tunstall chooses Hawaii

TWIN FALLS — Rick Tunstall, College of Southern Idaho sophomore center, will attend University of Hawaii on a basketball scholarship.

Tunstall, who has left Twin Falls to spend the summer with his parents in Cleveland, reportedly signed with the Rainbows over the weekend.

Tunstall played one season for CSI, transferring here from Duquesne.

ISU coach seeks more cagers

POCATELLO (UPI) — Idaho State basketball Coach Wayne Ballard has signed eight recruits for next season, but he says he's not done yet.

School officials said Thursday Ballard — who replaced Lynn Archibald as Bengals coach only six weeks ago — expects to sign as many as five more new players within the next few days.

Just three players from the 1981-82 team — Jackie Fleury, Mike Denkers and Doug Bonnell — are returning next fall. Four other Idaho State veterans chose to transfer away from Pocatello and five other Bengals graduated.

Ballard said "good fortune" has played as great a part as persistent recruiting in his bagging of eight high school and junior college players so far.

"In December we'll have a good idea which JC's and freshmen can play," Ballard added. "There's always some surprises — somebody you expect to help the following year plays this year, and somebody you expect to help immediately doesn't."

Ohio State star likely to go pro

COLUMBUS (UPI) — Ohio State forward Clark Kellogg, the Big Ten Player of the Year, is expected to announce today his intention to apply for the NBA draft.

The 6-foot-7 junior said earlier that he will turn pro, noting, "At this point it would be a correct assumption" that would be a good assumption. All indications are that I'm leaving."

He also said, "I can't see anything that would make me change my mind."

Kellogg, who will be 21 in July, led the Big Ten in rebounding last season with an average of 11.4 a game and was third in scoring with 17.3 points a contest.

Yogi Duke get All-Star honor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former All-Star and World Series rivals Yogi Berra and Duke Snider were named honorary captains Thursday for the July 13 major league All-Star game in Montreal.

The two Hall of Famers met six times in the midseason classic and five more times in postseason play — Berra with the New York Yankees and Snider with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Berra, the honorary American League captain, holds four All-Star records for a catcher — most games played (114), most putouts (61), most chances (68) and most assists (7). He is presently a coach with the Yankees.

Snider, the National League captain, is a broadcaster for the Expos in Montreal.

Indians hurler Denny risks fine

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Indians' pitcher Gabe Paul says pitcher John Denny may be fined if he misses a start because of a bruised right thumb suffered in a temper tantrum Tuesday.

Denny said he asked trainer Jimmy Warfield for some time alone in the locker room after he was taken out of a game, at which time he "kicked some chairs, wastebaskets and pushed this case."

The case was a wooden cover to a padded candy stand and it was feared he had injured the thumb seriously, but x-rays were negative and it was diagnosed as a bruise.

As for whether he would take his regular turn Sunday, Denny replied, "I don't know. We'll just have to wait and see."

Yanks' Cerone to have surgery

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankees catcher Rick Cerone, who broke his left thumb Tuesday night in a game against California, will undergo surgery today at New York University Medical Center, the team announced Thursday.

Cerone is expected to be out of action for 8-12 weeks, according to Dr. Robert Senseney, who described the injury to the 25-year-old Cerone as a fractured thumb and torn ligament.

"You're always worried whenever they cut you," Cerone said from the hospital. "But, I know it's the best thing for me. Hopefully, it'll turn out great. I'm a little scared. I just can't wait till tomorrow's over."

Parker goes on disabled list

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Pirates announced Thursday that rightfielder Dave Parker has been placed on the 15-day disabled list with a torn cartilage in his right wrist.

Parker, who suffered the injury swinging at a pitch in the Pirates 4-2 loss to the Houston Astros Tuesday night, was examined Thursday by team orthopedist Jack Falla.

Parker, batting .266 with three homers and 11 RBI in 24 games, was expected to have the wrist in a cast for three weeks.

Golf

Nicklaus, Palmer among challengers at Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Vance Heafner shot a 65 in soggy conditions Thursday to edge victory-hungry Jack Nicklaus and tie the known Lennie Clements for the first-round lead in the $350,000 Colonial National Invitation tournament.

Some of golf's great names — including Arnold Palmer — lined up close behind the leader on a day that began with sheets of rain pummeling the Colonial Country Club course and ended with the sun fighting its way through the clouds.

Heafner, one of the rising newcomers on the PGA Tour, birdied three of four holes in the middle of his round to fire his five-under 65. Clements and Nicklaus were at 66.

Next came a large group at 68 that included Palmer, George Archer, Andy North, Joe Imman, defending PGA champion Larry Nelson and Tom Kite, last year's leading money winner. Defending Colonial champion Fuzzy Zoeller and Jerry Pate were among those at 69.

Nicklaus' 66 was the best round he has ever shot at Colonial and Palmer's 68 was the best round he has had on the tour this year. Palmer, 52, has missed the cut in five of the seven tournaments in which he has played this year, while Nicklaus is looking for his first tour win since the 1980 PGA.

"What I hoped would happen was that I would put well," said Nicklaus, who bogeyed only one hole on the inundated course. "It is amazing to get the round in and to see the course play as good as it did. The bunkers were excellent, too. Of course, I wasn't in any of them."

Heavy rains had ripped through the course on Wednesday, and additional storms struck early Thursday. When the rains finally stopped about 10 a.m., work crews had to clear the course to get it into some sort of condition for play.

Then, with water standing in many fairways, but the greens and tees properly manicured, the select 102-man field was allowed to begin play at 10:30 a.m. (MDT).

"The important thing was they had the greens in good shape," said Clements, the last person to receive an invitation in this tournament. "I was impressed with the job they did to get the course ready. And I was surprised, too."

Palmer, who received a standing ovation from the crowd around the 18th green as he walked through the early evening shadows, said he had an idea he might play well this week.

"I told someone I had good vibes," said Palmer, winner of 61 tour events during a career that stretches back to 1955. "I thought if I could get a little enthusiasm and concentration going I might do pretty good. But, of course, you never know how things will turn out until you get on the course."

KATHY WHITWORTH Tied with Mickey Wright

ROSOWELL, Ga. (UPI) — Kathy Whitworth's quest for her record 83rd LPGA victory has been eased a bit this week by the absence of the top four money winners on this year's Ladies tour.

But even without the likes of Sally Little, Beth Ann, Patty Sheehan and Nancy Lopez-Melton to contend with, Whitworth still has her work cut out in the $150,000 Atlanta LPGA which starts its three-day run today. Defending champion Amy Alcott and former champion, Hollis Stacy, are both coming off two-week vacations and championing at the bit.

"I enjoy my role of defending champion," said Alcott, who has won 11 LPGA events and nearly $600,000 in the past 30 months. "I played well here last year when her seven-under-par 209 (nipped Little by a stroke). Shooting that (six-under) 66 in the final round, that was a real thrill. I'm really psyched up."

Stacy, two-time Women's U.S. Open champ, has shed 30 pounds while turning into one of the glamour girls of the LPGA tour and has won four tournaments the past nine months.

"Losing all that weight has given me a whole new attitude," said the 29-year-old Georgian. "I'm able to move around the ball much better. I'm enjoying golf more because of my new dedication. My desire has returned. When you get back in the habit of winning, you want to win more."

But the attention at the Atlanta event, as it has been everywhere on the LPGA tour for more than a month now, is focused on Whitworth, a 42-year-old Texan who will break out of a tie with retired Mickey Wright and into sole possession of the career LPGA record with her next victory.

Whitworth, who got her first LPGA triumph 20 years ago, tied Wright four weeks ago when she won the Women's International by a runaway nine strokes and almost nailed down record win No. 83 last week at Suffolk, Va., but let a four-stroke lead get away and lost to Little.

"I wasn't really thinking about No. 83 at the time, but I'll be glad when I see behind me," said Whitworth. "That seems to be all that people want to talk to me about these days. I suppose it will take some of the pressure off when I do win it, but I don't want to stop at 83."

The 54-hole Atlanta LPGA is officially known as the Lady Michele. There is a 78-player field, including three amateurs. The weatherman forecasts problems with Saturday's second round, saying a band of thunderstorms which have been pinging the mid-section of the country for several days should move through north Georgia then.

Preakness draw for post spots pleases trainers

BALTIMORE (UPI) — While each trainer was expressing satisfaction with Thursday's draw for post positions in Saturday's 107th running of the Preakness, Pat Kelly probably wore the biggest smile of all.

"The speed horses are on the outside," said Kelly, who trains second-favorite Laser Light and drew the No. 5 post in a field of eight 3-year-olds. "They'll have to use extra juice to get going around the first turn. I couldn't be happier. On paper, everything looks real good."

The speed horses Kelly is referring to are Cupecoy's Joy, the only filly in the field, and Aloma's Ruler, coming off a triumph in last Saturday's Withers at Aqueduct. Cupecoy's Joy drew the outside post and Aloma's Ruler will leave from the seventh position.

"I don't think the draw in a field of eight means that much," said Butch Lenzi, who trains Aloma's Ruler. "I'm happy where we are. My ideal post would have been No. 5 but this would be no problem."

Kelly is pleased because his colt had to weave his way through "12 or 13 horses" before coming off strong to finish second to Galo del Sol in the Kentucky Derby. With a small field, and the speed on the outside, it appears Laser Light is well placed.

"That's his style," said Kelly in explaining his colt's habit of finishing strong. "It's not going to change because the race is one-eighth of a mile shorter than the Derby. With eight horses in the field, I think we have a good chance. With the smaller field, my horse will be able to maneuver any way he wants. The race is less complicated and we can concentrate on going forward."

If all eight go to the post Saturday, the Preakness will have a record purse of $282,400 — with a record $212,400 going to the winner. Second place will be worth $40,000, third $20,000 and fourth $10,000.

Christiana Stable's Linkage, the early favorite at 7-5, drew the No. 6 post for the 1-16 mile Preakness. Completing the field from the rail out are supplemental entry Reinvested (Don MacBeth, 5-1); Cut Away (Jerry Bailey, 12-1); Water Bank (Marc Castaneda, 8-1); Bold Style (Leroy Moyers 12-1); Laser Light (Eddie Maple, 7-2); Linkage (Willie Shoemaker); Aloma's Ruler (Jack Kaelin, 6-1); and Cupecoy's Joy (Angel Santiago, 20-1).

Boise's Ken Hamilton loses control of his racer in the 1st turn during practice at Indy Thursday. Hamilton avoided the wall.

Garza crashes into wall, may miss Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Josele Garza, the 1981 Indianapolis Rookie of the Year, destroyed the rear axle of his March-Cosworth in a severe crash Thursday, possibly ending his bid for a second appearance in the Indianapolis 500.

Garza, 23, the first Mexican to qualify for the race, lost control of the car in the third turn and hit the wall after completing a spin. He then went airborne for 20 feet, spun again and came to a stop in the middle of the north short chute.

"I just lost the car in the middle of turn 3," Garza said, "did a spin and hit the wall. It's really totally destroyed."

The Garza Racing team has another March entered, but—according to Garza—"it is only halfway complete. March has not been providing us with the parts we want. We hope to take the good parts from the bent car to get the other one running."

Garza, who finished 23rd one year ago after leading for 15 laps, did not suffer any injuries, but complained of a sore neck and shins.

Garza was not the only driver with problems Thursday, although he was the only one to hit anything. Rookie Kenny Hamilton lost control of his car and spun into the infield, and Johnny Rutherford and Bill Alsup each had smoking engines at one time during the day.

"We pitched a motor," Alsup said, "and we're putting the car back in now and will be back out tomorrow."

The speed show continued Thursday as Rick Mears set still another unofficial record with a time of 206.8 mph. He supplanted his Penske teammate Kevin Cogan, who clocked a 206.3 mph lap Wednesday.

Mario Andretti also did Cogan a few split-seconds better, getting timed on an electric eye at 206.6. Andretti's Pat Patrick Racing teammate Gordon Johncock pushed his car up to 202.1 mph. Don Whittington got up to 204.5 mph—and Tom Sieva, the current official track record holder, managed 202.5 mph.

Four-time winner A.J. Foyt set a personal best for the month with 201.3

mph. Danny Ongals edged over 200 mph in the last few minutes of practice, and Desire Wilson of England, the second woman ever to try to make the Indianapolis field, got her sometimes troublesome car to 193 mph.

"We're still looking for a few more miles an hour," Wilson said. "We'd like to do 195 or better. It's difficult to put into words, but I know what I want."

There is still another day of practice before qualifications begin. The Thursday forecast for Saturday's weather called for continued warm temperatures and only a slight chance of precipitation.

Promoter: Secret meeting saved racing in late '50s

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Promoters probably saved auto racing by staging a secret meeting 25 years ago in which they plotted strategy to kill legislation banning the sport, one of the participants said Thursday.

Al Sweeney, a long-time promoter from Tampa, Fla., broke a 25-year silence in an interview with The Indianapolis News.

There were no minutes kept of the meeting at the Sherman Hotel in Chicago and all of those present pledged they would not reveal what happened, Sweeney said.

In attendance were 25 prominent figures, including race promoters, sanctioning body officials and fair executives. At the time—the 1958-59 season—many races were run on fairground tracks.

The object of their attention was a bill introduced in the U.S. Senate by the late Richard E. Neuberger, who reportedly became incensed when he saw a fatality at a speedway in his hometown of Portland, Ore.

His bill would have abolished auto racing in the United States. The promoters assembled for their secret conclave and decided to hire Bligh A. Dodes, president of the St. Lawrence County Fair—at Gouverneur, N.Y., to lead the lobbying effort against the bill.

The late Estes Kefauver, a senator from Tennessee, took up the fight against Neuberger's bill and eventually struck a deal with him," the newspaper said. "Kefauver, according to reports, promised to help Neuberger on another legislative matter if he would drop the anti-racing bill—which he did."

Funds misuse prompts LSU to fire three

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Chancellor James Wharton of Louisiana State University dismissed three members of the school's financially ailing athletic department Thursday and said five more could face disciplinary action for financial mismanagement.

The action stemmed from a year-long audit study of LSU's athletic department finances — a 50-page report that showed evidence of falsified expense reports, excessive overtime payments and personal expenses billed to the university.

"Too many people were spending money and just not following university policy and procedures," Wharton said at a news conference.

Jack Gilmore, assistant director of athletics for business, Patricia Newman, assistant director of women's athletics and track coach Jan Johnson were told to leave the university.

Wharton said he accepted Ms. Newman's resignation, approved Gilmore's retirement and told Johnson he could remain until his contract with LSU expired in June.

He said Ms. Newman and Johnson made commitments to repay some money to the university, but he refused to specify the amount.

Earlier this year, the Board of Supervisors removed Athletic Director Paul Dietzel from his post after Wharton warned that red ink in department books could grow to a deficit of $1 million by the end of the school year.

The audit report said some clerical workers were receiving more than $8,000 a year in overtime — extra payments nearly equaling base salary. It said $7,000 from the director's budget was spent for coffee, and the university was paying newspaper and magazine subscriptions for the staff.

Auditors said $12,000 in insurance was purchased by the department without clearing the expenditure through the central office, as required. Another $5,000 worth of athletic supplies were purchased from a shop owned by an LSU coach.

Expenses were claimed without receipts or with apparently falsified receipts. In other cases, expenses were duplicated in separate claims, the audit report said.

Cost $25 million; filmed on 3 continents; huge cast

NBC gambling on 'Marco Polo'

Series is so long it may wear out its welcome

Provides a relief from networks' regular fare

By BOB WISEHART
Newhouse Newhouse Service

To call "Marco Polo" a mini-series, or a mini anything, is like saying Godzilla was just a lizard with a thyroid condition.

It took a long time to make (13 months of shooting), and it'll take a long time to watch (10 hours over four nights).

That's nothing compared with the 24 years it took the real Marco Polo to travel from Venice to China and back in the 13th century. But at times, especially during the first four hours, it seems that long.

Officially, the massive project cost $25 million. "Marco Polo" will be seen in 70 countries from the United States on one side of the globe to China on the other.

With 100 speaking parts and 5,000 extras, it was filmed at 24 locations on three continents. It also had one of the most powerful censors in history — the Chinese government, which had script approval and by all accounts didn't hesitate to use it.

"Marco Polo" begins Sunday on NBC, continuing Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

A 28-year-old American actor named Ken Marshall plays Marco. The casting is risky. Marshall's only film released in this country — the ridiculous "Till," with the ridiculous Brooke Shields — was a flop.

The cast includes four Oscar winners — John Gielgud, Burt Lancaster, Anne Bancroft and John Houseman — plus Leonard Nimoy and Ying Ruecheng (touted as "China's greatest actor") as Kublai Khan.

So if ambition and size count for anything, "Marco Polo" lumbers to the screen like nothing before it.

Quite a load to put on the shoulders of an inexperienced actor like Marshall, who wasn't the first choice for the role — or the second, or the third.

"If I thought about what could happen — stress, failure or anything in between — it would drive me up a wall," says Marshall, reached by telephone in London where he's making the science-fiction film "Krull."

"I don't stay up nights worrying," he says. "If you approach this business with that kind of mentality, you're gonna be a basket case pretty quickly."

Marshall, a native of Michigan, says he has spent so much time ricocheting from one continent to another that it's all he can do to remember his lines and where to put his feet.

"I'm a little groggy," he confesses. "When I started 'Krull' in January, I was still working weekends on 'Marco.' In the 13 months I spent on 'Marco,' I only had eight days off."

Marshall is only four years out of drama school — New York's Julliard, where he studied under Houseman, his co-star in "Marco Polo."

An appearance in a well-received revival of "West Side Story" led to a chance to work with Lancaster and Marcello Mastroianni in an Italian film, "La Pella." After finishing that, he planned to take a holiday and drive north to Paris, then fly home.

What Marshall didn't know was that by this time producer Vincenzo Labella was desperate to find someone to play Marco Polo. The first choice, British actor Peter Firth ("Tess"), was rejected by Procter & Gamble Co. — which had kicked in $10 million to help finance the project. Procter & Gamble preferred an American in the title role.

For various reasons, two other actors, Michael Ontkean and Mindy Pinfold, didn't quite make it either. By the time Labella got around to Marshall, "Marco Polo" was already under way.

Marshall says he'll remember many things about the making of "Marco Polo" — including galloping a horse along the top of China's legendary Great Wall —

A Mongolian warrior leads Kublai Khan's horse in a scene from 'Marco Polo'. All costumes for the series had to be hand-made

Leonard Nimoy, Ken Marshall and Burt Lancaster head the cast with solid performances

NEW YORK — Tony Lo Bianco portrays a coward in NBC's epic "Marco Polo," but researches typecasting. The tough ex-Golden Gloves contender from Brooklyn isn't the least bit afraid to bite the hand of the industry that occasionally feeds him.

"Garbage" he said of what passes for prime time programming. "What they've done is lower the standards of the public. They've constantly brought down the public's taste... by giving them as much garbage as they could give them — as you can see by what shows are 1 to 15 (on the A.C. Nielsen ratings scale)."

"There's insanity and foolishness in the whole purpose of our business any more. Our profession has been lost and discarded."

"Marco Polo," Lo Bianco said, is what television should be as opposed to what it has become.

Who shot in Morocco and Italy and then they went on and shot in China," he said. "It's going to be beautiful. The costumes are going to be so gorgeous. Each costume is handmade. They were all sent to a museum in Washington."

Lo Bianco personally never made it to China for the climax of the massive four-hour miniseries. His character, the craven Brother Nicholas, emissary of Pope Gregory X on the 13th century voyage of Marco Polo, turns tail and runs before the rest of the company ever gets to the court of Kublai Khan.

But so historically accurate is the show that it has been chosen as subject matter for Teachers Guides to Television, which is just the function Lo Bianco feels a video actor should fulfill.

"It was the actor in the theater who was supposed to be the educator, the conscience of the government and society. He called attention to injustices and he was a constant reminder," he said. "That has gone away. You can only find it rarely now, on PBS or occasionally in things like 'Marco Polo' or 'Jesus of Nazareth.'"

"You have to pick and find your quality shows now, and the worst part of it is, it's a snowball. When you feed trash and cater to the lowest form, you make the young grow up on that and they don't know any better."

"So you've got a public that's been brainwashed into taste that is geared to 11 and 12-year-old mentality. These kids are some of our executives now — some of them are 30 years old — have been brought upon this and they really believe that's what it's about."

The result, Lo Bianco said, is garbage recycled for yet another generation of youngsters who will take their view of the world from the television screen.

"Now we have 30-year-old persons who are in responsible positions who were brought up on that and they are now making (television) tapes... just constantly feeding the cancer," he said. "I don't know if there's a way out of it any more."

"We are the spoilers. We are so fat and lazy. The art has been made so anybody can do it."

Lo Bianco said deteriorating television fare has produced a "synthetic society" in which "nobody wants to work any more."

"We say, 'well, when's my job?'" he said. "How come the boss doesn't have any allegiance to me any more? How come he's going to make his product over in a foreign country where he can make a dollar?"

"Well, the workers think that way too. They have no allegiance to their boss or their craft — not like the Chinese or Japanese who are eager to do a good job, who take pride in their work, who arrive early and stay late because they have pride and want to do a good job and feel that they are part of an organization."

Quality is alive and well and will be living on NBC for four memorable nights next week.

'Darth Vader' stuntman to appear at promotion in Burley next week

BURLEY — It's tough being Darth Vader. That's not so much because Darth is such a bad guy (in fact, he turns out to be the good guy in the next "Star Wars" film), it's just that it's hard to tell what's going on in all the movie's scenes.

"I'm surprised as anybody when I see the movie," says Terry Kelly, a professional stuntman who served as Darth Vader in some scenes of "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

Kelly, who will be in Burley for three days next week on a promotional tour, says so much of the movie is dubbed in after the actors are finished that it's hard to act out many scenes.

Voices, weapons, laser shots and backdrops are often added after the actors have finished their roles, he says. "It's really hilarious. You go through it all and have no idea what it's going to look like," says Kelly. "A lot of times we have a lot of fun with it because we make up lines and scream at each other during the battle scenes. None of that ever appears in the movie. Almost all the sounds are done after the filming."

Kelly just finished six weeks of filming for the third movie in the popular space saga, "Revenge of the Jedi," which won't be released until May, 1983. "It will be out May 21, 1983. All the 'Star Wars' films will be released on May 21," he says. "That's the date the first 'Star Wars' film was released."

The real Darth Vader in the movies is played by David Prowse, a British weight lifting champ. James Earl Jones provides the spooky voice and Kelly fills in for Prowse for any stunts or dangerous scenes.

Kelly plays Darth Vader for most of the battle scenes, including all the "sword fights" using the Jedi's flashy laser weapons. Kelly also played a rebel warrior and an Empire storm trooper in several scenes. "That means I got killed a lot," he adds.

Kelly will be at Bonanza Motors in Burley with performances daily at 3, 4:30, 6 and 7:30 p.m.

The show includes two Jawa creatures ("Little munchkins from the first movie") and his full-Darth-Vader costume. Afterwards, he'll answer questions and offer some tips on what will happen in the next "Star Wars" film.

"Luke will be wearing black next time," says Kelly. "He goes over and we find out that Darth has been the good guy all the time."

Terry Kelly, a stuntman from the first three 'Star Wars' films, will perform May 17, 18 and 19

Inside Sports calls him vain, selfish, obsessed

Article picks on Pete Rose

By LAURA BERMAN
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Pete Rose proves that heroism in sports is no signature of character. A profile of the baseball star in Inside Sports (May) depicts him as arrogant, selfish, vain and obsessed by the game of baseball. "Ask Pete Rose the state of the world, and he will show you how well... a new callus is forming on the palm of his right hand."

Rose's calluses extend to his emotional life. When writer Roger Director relays a message from Rose's ex-wife, who comments that his kids miss him and don't understand why he left, Rose says he has no sympathy for his wife. "She ain't a ball player's wife no more, is she? Why should she complain? She filed for the divorce. I didn't."

He also says, "What do I need a wife for? As far as being lonely, baseball is my substitute."

There is something fascinating, though, about a 41-year-old man whose life begins and ends on the baseball diamond, who is willingly defined by the game he plays. "I play the game of baseball the way the game should be played," Rose says. Director argues that Rose's genius is not heroic, that he "represents what every player can be. In so doing, he has elevated the most basic notions of winning and teamwork to levels that have edified even the best of those who have played with him."

Eye-catchers:

"The Runner (May). Proof that running long distances is unnatural, aberrant behavior lies in a reader survey on running and sex. The most bizarre statistic: 26.5 percent of those surveyed report they would give up sex before they would quit running. Among women, the figure is a heady 38.1 percent. Running for some becomes 'so consummately wonderful that it supersedes all other feelings... the running-becomes-for them a sort of sexual surrogate,' comment the editors.

The Washington Journalism Review (May) — R.D. Rosen inspects TV's "The People's Court," and notes that it has advanced the art of reality programming "while evoking established values that take us all the way back to 'Leave It to Beaver.'" Roone Arledge reveals himself to be a man of boundless curiosity. He also predicts that the electronic media will spawn a Golden Age of feuding — that greater access to information will lead people to seek still more information in books.

ABC hangs on to Nielsen top spot

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS regained its primacy in evening news-program last week but failed, for the second week in a row, to topple ABC from the prime time winner's circle.

ABC used four old reliables and two specials — "Inside the Third Reich," Part I, and "Battle of the Network Stars" — to rack up a rating of 15.7 and an audience share of 28. CBS won the top slot in the Nielsen Top 10 with the feature film, "Caddyshack," but fell into second place with a full rating point at 14.7 and 28. NBC was in its accustomed third place with 13.3 and 24.

The CBS "Evening News" won its time slot with a rating of 12.2 and a share of 26. ABC's "World News Tonight," which won the numbers game during the previous week, was back in second place with 11.1 and 23 and ABC's "Nightline" was a distant third at 9.7 and 21.

The top 10 programs for the week ending May 9, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. Caddyshack (CBS).
2. Dynasty (ABC).
3. TV Censored Bloopers (NBC).
4. Too Close for Comfort (ABC).
5. Three's Company (ABC).
6. Facts of Life (NBC).
7. Hart to Hart (ABC).
8. M-A-S-H (CBS).
9. Inside the Third Reich, Part I (ABC).
10. Battle of the Network Stars (ABC).

Marco

Continued from Page E1 but that what he'll remember most of all is the Curse of Babel on the set.

"We had an Italian director speaking to an interpreter, who relayed what he said to me," he recalls. "Then he'd speak to another Italian who'd speak to a Chinese who could speak Italian who'd then go to a Chinese who could speak whatever we needed that day to move the extras around."

"Sometimes we'd spend half a day just getting the directions to a simple scene done right."

"This brings me to tonight, which 'Marco Polo' has in abundance."

"At times, this is as beautiful a piece of television as ever has been broadcast. And there are some crackjack performances, notably Lancaster as Baisardo, later Pope Gregory X."

"At the end, Lancaster still has the vitality of 10 men on screen."

"But 'Marco Polo' takes so long to get going that by the time the adventure heads east, you're so grateful for the motion picture that you're headed to the store for a six-pack."

"In one early scene, Anne Bancroft as Marco's mother lingers on the verge of death until you wish she'd just die and be done with it."

"On her deathbed, she reads a letter from her long-absent husband, who went to China before Marco, sent her years before. She reads and sobs... reads a little more, sobs a lot more."

Then Marco reads the letter, and he starts sobbing. Then they sob together... and read... and sob.

Is this "Marco Polo" or the story of the Great Flood?

"Marco Polo" is loaded with the kind of hapless overkill that stops the narrative cold. A project like this should pull you in from the beginning. Instead it threatens to drive you away.

As Marco, Marshall is less than electrifying. He appears to have confused the character's open-mindedness with simple-mindedness, quality work in it. No question about that. But length is the killer here. Most of all, "Marco Polo" is like a visiting relative who quickly wears out his welcome.

Summer album action heating up

By GEORGE KANZLER
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — Summer, according to the old rock 'n' roll classic, may be a time for "dancing in the streets," but it's also a time for rocking in the stadiums and arenas. The biggest supergroups emerge from their cocoons in summer to play the biggest outdoor stadiums and fairgrounds and the indoor arenas.

But it takes a lot of publicity to sell out stadiums, and what better publicity is there than a hit album? So this is the season when the groups that will be touring this summer release new albums. Here are three new ones from proven stadium-filler bands:

"HOT SPACE" QUEEN (Elektra Records). Queen likes to keep all the bases covered. In the last nine years, the British group has kept pace with trends, from progressive rock through disco ("Another One Bites the Dust"). This new album is no exception, offering a wide range of styles, including some impressive forays into funk-rock and soul.

The album opens with a direct lift from the style of Stevie Wonder — synthesized rhythms and Freddie Mercury's remarkably Wonder-like opening lines on "Staying Power." The cut even contains punchy, Stevie-inspired horn lines. The lyrics are a pastiche of erotic self-congratulations from the macho-soul idiom.

"Dancer," the next cut, takes inspiration from Prince, with Mercury approximating Prince's lascivious falsetto and the band in a good funk-rock groove.

"Back Chat" is a dance-beat tune based on British slang, while "Body Language" returns to funk-rock electronics and salivating, conceivably lyrics.

"Action This Day," which ends Side One, and "Calling All Girls" on Side Two are naive 1960s calls for love.

After the funk-soul of Side One, Side Two's more conventional rock and pop are a letdown, though. Queen now has an album that could make all the charts from black to adult-contemporary.

Side Two is most notable for "Cool Cat," done in Smokey Robinson-style falsetto by Mercury over a light funk beat, and "Put Out the Fire," a hard-rocking, ironic plea for gun control.

"DIVER DOWN" VAN HALEN (Warner Bros. Records).

It is possible for the enfant terrible of heavy-metal rock to produce an album that includes a country-blues featuring clarinet and a doo-wop, a cappella version of "Happy Trails."

Yes it is, and this is it. Also included is Roy Orbison's "Oh Pretty Woman" and Marvin Gaye's "Dancing in the Street."

The voice of visually flamboyant and socially outrageous David Lee Roth is merely serviceably rock-husky, but Eddie Van Halen's guitar lives up to its not-so-as-he-peals-off-sharp, memorable riffs and lines that easily could stand up in the high-tech world of jazz-fusion.

Van Halen transcends the teeny-bopper image with this ambitious and musical album.

Listening to Cheap Trick is like doing an aural crossword (or crossword) puzzle with Beatles clues.

The multiple guitars layered acoustically and electrically, the "y'ea, yea, yea," even phrases like "I got a hold on me" — they all appear in the lodgepoles that make up half the songs here. The rest are competent, but sometimes smarmy, rock.

Home repair manuals make practical gifts

By STEPHANIE FULLER
Chicago Tribune

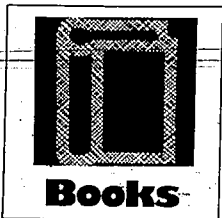

A good, basic home repair book makes a better housewarming or apartment-warming gift than a bottle of fine old wine or a crystal candy dish. The book lasts longer than the wine and is used more often than the dish.

That basic book is the first step to a solid home repair library, which need not be terribly costly.

"Acquire one solid, all-around book," said Mrs. Fix-It, Beverly deJulio, consumer consultant for the Loctite Corp. of Cleveland, an adhesive and chemical company.

Then collect books on specific subjects as you need them.

Four top sellers in the general home repair category today are: "Reader's Digest Complete Do-it-yourself Manual" (Reader's Digest Association Inc., $20.50); the "Reader's Digest Fix It Yourself Manual," ($20.50); "Better Homes and Gardens Complete Guide to Home Repair, Maintenance & Improvement" (Better Homes and Gardens Books, $19.95); and "America's Handyman Book," by the staff of Family Handyman magazine (Charles Scribner's Sons, $16.95).

Books

"Since you have to have one basic book, I'd pick the 'Reader's Digest Do-it-yourself Manual,'" said deJulio, "because it covers all general problems, has excellent illustrations and is easy to understand. It is revised and updated constantly. I've used it to answer questions about masonry such as patching a whole section of a concrete driveway. It tells you everything from how to mix concrete to bonding agents."

Agreeing with her is Bernard Gladstone, syndicated home-repair columnist, who is hesitant to recommend basic home repair books because he thinks his own is the best. His is the "New York Times Manual of Home Repair" (New York Times Books, $14.95 in hardback; paperback $6.95). Gladstone thinks his book is still 85 percent current, but he is just finishing a new one that will be out in about a year.

Gladstone also recommends America's Handyman, but says the new Better Homes and Gardens book is "poorly organized and the graphics are terrible. There's too much detail and confusion."

Another literary home repair product on the market is the Popular Mechanics Encyclopedia, an 18-volume set priced at $107.10 and available by direct-mail from the Grolier Education Corp., Sherman Turnpike, Danbury, Conn. 06816.

Gladstone criticizes this saying it "hasn't been revised in 20 years and is outdated, although some articles are good."

deJulio disagrees with this philosophy saying some basics never change and some of the older books are sound today.

"After a person has purchased his or her 'general' books," she "should consult the library, used book stores and different collections (i.e. Time-Life books) for specific books," said deJulio. "I'm a great believer in the library as a wealth of information."

"The Time-Life books" are expensive, but you can buy just the specific subject you need such as a volume on kitchens and bathrooms or one on roofs and siding."

In addition to being expensive, the Time-Life books go into too much detail, said Gladstone.

Better Homes and Gardens and Reader's Digest also have collections as do Eisinger Publications, Sunset Books and a host of others.

deJulio has discovered another source of information — hardware, paint and lumber stores where different companies offer pamphlets for free or at a nominal cost.

"I picked up a pamphlet on wallpapering for 50 cents and it had all the detailing and illustrations you could possibly need. Always keep your eyes open in stores for pamphlets. Companies put a great deal of money in them and make them worthwhile for you."

In today's economy and considering the amount of rehabbing that's going on, used book stores can be a gold mine for home repair literature.

Connery keeps it light in 'Wrong'

And he says he may bring back his 'James Bond' role in 'Thunderball' remake

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

NEW YORK — Sean Connery is taller, grayer and balding than he looks in the movies.

In fact, he brings his latest film, the black-comedy adventure "Wrong Is Right," to an uproarious conclusion by losing his toupee as he emerges from an airplane. The idea was his.

"I always like to find a humorous angle in anything I do," he says while relaxing in his New York hotel suite and trying to ward off a sore throat he felt developing aboard the Concorde that brought him from London that morning.

"I put in a lot of the jokes in the early James Bond movies, because I think humor is more revealing of character than chest-thumping. I think it's important to show heroes are not really as smart as they think they are."

In "Wrong Is Right," Connery plays yet another "twisted" character, a television anchorman who keeps flying from one trouble spot to another in a desperate effort to avert World War III.

"What appealed to me about the character in the first place was that I saw him as a cross between Ernest Hemingway and Barbara Walters."

"I thought it was appropriate to remove my hairpiece at the end because the whole film is about the theatricality of world politics and television journalism," he says.

SEAN CONNERY
Enjoyed 'Wrong Is Right' role

say about the show-business aspect of "lost things today." The older audiences will roll with it easier than people in their 50s, like me.

"In my day, people said something was true because they'd read it in the papers. Nowadays it's because they see it on screen."

"I'm also a big fan of television news in general, and Charles Kuralt in particular. But I'm a compulsive channel switcher because I can't stand all the boring commercials. In Britain, the commercials are outrageous and humorous, so you remember the product. Here, apparently, a different philosophy prevails."

Movies

Removing his shoes and socks, Connery sinks into an armchair and looks more tired than Agent 007 ever did, given after saving us from yet another global megalomaniac.

"I've just done four films back to back, all in different locations — 'Outland,' 'Time Bandits,' 'Wrong Is Right' and 'Five Days of Summer,' a romantic 1930s-type love triangle in which I play a middle-aged doctor, with a young wife."

"That one called for a lot of mountain-climbing. I find activity itself creates its own energy, but I'd say I'm entitled to rest a while in the Bahamas, or maybe Spain."

Added to the strain of non-stop movie-making, the 53-year-old actor arrived here only after a weekend of jetting around the world that would kill many a younger man: Los Angeles to London to Scotland to London to New York.

"I had to stop off in Perth (Australia) to see my son, Jason, doing a play in rep. It's a wonderful play about the one Spartan who survived the Battle of Thermopylae."

What is it like for a young actor to find Sean Connery sitting in the audience on opening night?

"He was sick as a pig, of course, but that's all part of acting."

Before the first James Bond movie, "Dr. No," sent Connery jetting to worldwide fame nearly 20 years ago, he'd had a long, rough time reaching the top of his profession.

After making six highly successful "Bond" adventures, Connery ceded the unflappable British agent to Roger Moore and went on to make such distinguished non-Bond films as "The Wind and the Lion," "The Man Who Would Be King," "Robin and Marian" and "The Great Train Robbery."

Purely as movies, they were as good as the Bond epics or better. But despite Moore's success in the role, audiences still clamor for Connery as the Ian Fleming hero.

And he's more than willing to comply — provided he can find the right script, which would necessarily deal with an older, if not wiser, James Bond.

Although he was hesitant to talk about it, that script may have arrived in the form of a remake of "Thunderball" (which Connery first did in 1965), merged with a few unpublished Fleming stories.

It seems "Thunderball" is the one Fleming property for which Albert "Cubby" Broccoli doesn't own exclusive film-remake rights. So if script, financing and casting go according to plan, he may once again be wielding a deadly pistol in one hand and a vodka martini in the other.

Movie reviews in brief

From Times-News wire services

CHARIOTS OF FIRE: The beautifully told but predictable story of two athletes who competed in the 100-meter dash for England in the 1924 Olympics. One man runs for the glory of God; the other, to punish his adversaries. Rated PG, 4 stars.

CONAN THE BARBARIAN: Arnold Schwarzenegger as the musclebound comic-strip hero doing dire battle with evil James Earl Jones as the leader of a primitive snake cult. Brutal baloney. Rated R, 1½ stars.

ON GOLDEN POND: The pairing of Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn created all the magic good for in this touching, delightfully good-humored film about an aging couple spending what may be their last summer together. Rated PG, 4 stars.

PORKY'S: The ultimate 1950s teenage macho sex fantasy movie, featuring naked girls, dirty language, fistfights, clever kids and stupid cops, and actual sim-u-la-ted sex! Plus, prophylactics, double entendres, racism, fat jokes, hookers, Alex Karras and more! Dumb, very dumb. Rated R, 1 star.

RICHARD PRYOR, LIVE ON THE SUNSET STRIP: The last 20 minutes of this recently filmed Richard Pryor concert includes some of the most powerful personal comedy ever performed by a stand-up comic. It's a tough, horrifying, somehow hilarious bit on his cocaine addiction and his near-death from burning. The first 60 minutes isn't bad, either. Rated R, 3½ stars.

'On Golden Pond' tops $100 million mark

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The motion picture "On Golden Pond," starring Hollywood legends Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn, has broken the $100 million mark in gross revenues at the box office.

Universal Studios, which distributed the film, disclosed last week the movie grossed $100,251,343 during the first 21 weeks of release in the United States and Canada.

The film, a story about a couple coping with old age, collected three Academy Awards including best actor and actress for Fonda and Miss Hepburn and best screenplay adaptation for Ernest Thompson.

It featured Fonda and his daughter, Jane Fonda, in their first movie together.

"On Golden Pond" is still being featured in some area theaters.

'Hero' plot a flop despite help from multi-talented Pryor

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

Richard Pryor is not only an inspired comedian, but such a fine all-around actor that it's a pity he can't find better material than "Some Kind of Hero," which is every kind of flop.

In this blighted enterprise, he plays innocent, good-hearted Eddie Keller, captured by the Viet Cong his first day in Vietnam. His captors keep urging him to sign a "confession" of war guilt, which he steadfastly refuses to do until his cellmate Vinnie (Ray Sharkey) falls desperately ill, and the confession is the only way to get him to a hospital.

Released after six years, Eddie is welcomed home as a hero, but his wife Lisa (Lynne Moody) has some good news and some bad news for him. The good news is brief — he's the father of a cute 6-year-old daughter he'd never been informed about.

The bad news keeps piling on until Eddie becomes a modern-day Job. His wife, out of loneliness one Christmas, has taken on a lover, who has helped her bankrupt Eddie's once-thriving bookstore. His mother has had a stroke and is now in a nursing home she can't afford.

To cap it all, the Army is reluctant to give him his back pay because of that confession he signed under duress in Vietnam, and no bank will give him a loan because of his blatant lack of collateral.

On the bright side, he picks up high-priced hooker Toni (Margot Kidder, the lovely Lois Lane of the "Superman" movies) in a bar, and she inspires him to rise above his current difficulties.

Since the straight world seems to have no use for him,

Eddie decides to enter a life of crime. He tries to hold up a bank with a water pistol, but they just laugh at him; and the elderly lady owner of a boutique he tries to rob chases him with an umbrella.

As ineffectual a hoodlum as he is a civilian, Eddie finally lucks out when he steals a bag filled with $300,000 worth of Treasury notes from two unsavory characters who richly deserve to lose it. And he finally puts his Army experience to the test when he foils some vicious mobster out to share his loot.

Even described thus briefly, it's easy to see what kind of mess "Some Kind of Hero" is. The Vietnam scenes (particularly unconvincing) set out to combine the prison-camp horrors of "Bridge on the River Kwai" and "The Deer Hunter," but they just don't come off. And Sharkey's role in them is so minimal you wonder what he did to deserve top male billing under Pryor.

Back in the States, there's a feeble attempt to comment on the plight of the returning veteran in imitation of "Coming Home," but this, too, doesn't work, and is quickly scuttled for a standard crime caper movie laced with bathroom humor.

Worst of all, in Toni's character we have the ultimate cliché of the hooker with a heart of gold, who not only gives her penniless lover freebies on her nights off but even offers to lend him $4,000 out of her earnings. Clearly, Beverly Hills has developed a new breed of prostitute when no one else was looking.

Equally tired are the botched bank robbery and the underworld complications Eddie brings on himself but successfully vanquishes in the end through luck, pluck and a helpful screenwriter.

Occasionally, Pryor's manic genius cuts through all this second-hand drass.

A pity Schwarzenegger can't act, too

Evil Jones saves 'Conan' script

By RICHARD FREEDMAN
Newhouse News Service

It was a stroke of some sort of genius to cast Arnold Schwarzenegger and James Earl Jones as the hero and villain, respectively, of "Conan the Barbarian."

Schwarzenegger has been like the trunk of a gnarled old apple tree, and Jones can act.

But in the ongoing sword-and-sandal Swooshes while "Conan" is — marginally less — offensive because it is less pretentious — than "Excalibur." It's nowhere near as good as "Dragonslayer."

We are in the so-called Hyborian Age of 12,000 years ago, when men were men and table manners had not yet evolved. A marauding band of tribesmen led by Thulsa Doom (James Earl Jones), head of the unpleasant snake cult of Set, kills young Conan's parents and casts him into slavery.

Some 15 years later, the orphan grows up to be Arnold Schwarzenegger, the Austrian Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia. When he says "Is this your robe?" It comes out sounding like "Is this Europe?" Conan may need a travel agent even more than a diet coach.

Anyhow, after fighting in some fearsome gladiatorial combats, he escapes from captivity and goes on the road to wreak vengeance on Thulsa Doom and his many minions.

Conan's companions in this worthy enterprise are Subotai the Mongol

Movies

(surfer Gerry Lopez); Valeria, Queen of Thieves (Sandahl Bergman, who brings a distinct touch of Malibu Beach to the proceedings); and a wise Oriental hermit (Mako), who narrates Conan's adventures to us in a gravelly voice.

They are commissioned to rescue the erring daughter of King Osric (Max von Sydow, looking more like Good King Wenceslas) from the clutches of Thulsa Doom. It seems he's now running a sort of Jonestown death cult, which has seduced the proto-hippie Princess (Valerie Quennessen).

There, surrounded by priests out of a road-company "Aida," Doom holds forth in barbaric splendor. He wields snakes the way Alice in Wonderland uses flamingoes for croquet mallets, serves up cauldrons of soup composed of human hands and heads, and orders Conan crucified on the Tree of Woe.

Only by having mystic rings pointed all over his inexpressive mug does Conan survive this ordeal to interrupt a Cecil B. DeMille orgy of Doom's disciples and set fire to his palace.

All this silly savagery takes place against a ponderously insistent score by Basil — 50 — who — helps himself generously to the chorus. Prokofiev wrote for "Alexander Nevsky." But the music more often sounds like Carl Orff on an orff day.

Based on the half-century-old comic strip that got a new lease on life during the depths of the '60s, "Conan the Barbarian" is directed by John Milus ("Big Wednesday") with an aggressive brutality that beggars description.

He can't elicit professional performances from either Schwarzenegger or Bergman, but neither can he spoil the evil majesty Jones brings to the idiotic lines he must speak. And at least Milus has the good sense to give Schwarzenegger a minimum of dialogue and maximum of muscle-flexing.

"Conan the Barbarian" even boasts an epigraph from Nietzsche, no less: "That which does not kill us makes us stronger." It's a more accurate description of most "health" foods than of the leaden film that follows it.

What's what

Our Love and War man has been looking into the divorce statistics again, and he's found that women who split up after the age of 40 rarely remarry unless they do so immediately. Two-thirds of them never remarry. Only a tenth of them marry right away. The younger the woman at the time of her divorce, the more likely, and the more quickly, she'll remarry.

Q. Women tend to develop facial wrinkles at an earlier age than men, do they not? Why?
A. Generally, yes. Because women's skin generally is less oily.

Sir, if you depress the scales at 226½ pounds, you weigh exactly as much as the world's heaviest elephant tusk, now on display in the British Museum.

RICH MAN, POOR MAN

The rich man Robert Morris financed the American Revolution, or much of it. When money was worthless, he founded the Bank of North America, and issued notes on his own credit to serve as money for everybody. The ultimate winner was dealer, he stood up owning more land on this continent than anybody. But he overreached, poor fellow. His massive fortune hurried down the drain in land speculation. He went to debtors prison for three years. He died impoverished in obscurity. Watch your footing, young fellow. There's a quack and out there.

LEMONS, RABBITS, PRAIRIE CHICKENS

Why are long lemons juicier than round lemons? ... More than a third of the world's lemons have been created in the United States. ... Rabbits don't perspire, you know. ... Tank warfare injuries mostly are burns. ... When prairie chickens feel romantic, they deliver mating calls that sound like "boom!"

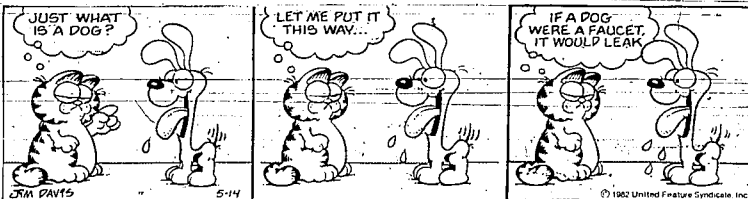

Whiskey with soda is drunker than the like amount of whiskey by itself. Or so say the medical researchers. That's providing, no doubt, the drinkers of same imbibe them at the same speed. This suggests that champagne is drunker than a less bubbly wine of equal alcoholic content. If this is not exactly right, it's close enough.

Q. What's "sraw fire love"?
A. Where'd you hear that one? It's an old French expression for teenage romance. Blazes quickly, leaves few ashes.

Coleman fighting kidney disease

Q. I think Gary Coleman is a little angel and so talented for such a small child. How old is he?
A. Coleman is 14. His small size is the result of a life-long battle with kidney disease, something his parents have never hidden and which Coleman takes in stride. He had a kidney transplant when he was 5. He says, "Quite matter-of-factly that he does not expect to be taller than 5-feet-3 or 4. Recently, Coleman has learned to use a new portable dialysis machine by himself. Although he played an angel in the NBC April 5 movie, "The Kid with the Broken Halo," it wasn't type-casting. He is a bright, outgoing young man full of fun and occasional temper.

Q. Aren't Maureen Stapleton and Jean Stapleton sisters? They look alike.
A. Maureen Stapleton's Oscar-revived old misconception. The ladies aren't related. Jeanne Murray shortened her first name and borrowed her mother's maiden name. Lois Maureen Stapleton dropped her first name.
Q. What happened to "The Doctors"? We were told to watch for a new show and then the show disappeared. It's still advertised by our stations.
A. NBC still has "The Doctors," but it's at noon, when many stations have had newscasts or other programs for years. The stations aren't about to drop their own shows and most haven't found another slot for it. NBC is trying to jazz up "The Doctors" with new cast members, but the show ranks last among daytime programs and the future is dim. The advertising you hear is network promotional announcements that often are difficult for local TV engineers to cut. In another daytime shakeup, NBC moved "Texas" to 11 a.m. and it, too, isn't being carried by all NBC stations. NBC's moves have been an attempt to improve the ratings. Both shows are in trouble and may not last beyond the summer.

Q. Settle something for us. My husband says "Hill Street Blues" is filmed in Chicago. I say it is New York. We've never heard they say what city they are in.
A. Good reason. In spite of the gritty, authentic look of the show, it isn't set in any particular city. Hill Street Station is any big city police precinct station. The scenes shown behind the title and credits were done in Chicago, but the rest is filmed in Los Angeles.

Q. I thought I read that Bob Crane, star of "Hogan's Heroes," was murdered, but I never saw any follow up on who did it and why. Why have the papers ignored this?
A. Crane's 1978 death while playing a theater engagement in Scotland, Ariz., still is unsolved.

Q. Tell me the name and date made of the Catholic movie starring Martin Sheen as a Roman Catholic priest in Ireland to stop the mass in Latin. I saw it recently in Denver, but no one anywhere else seems to have heard of it.
A. The 1973 CBS-TV movie "Catholics" was adapted from Brian Moore's novel of the same name. Sheen was the young priest sent by Rome to convince the older priests, Trevor Howard and Cyril Cusack, to adapt more modern church ways, including the change from the traditional Latin mass. The movie was repeated by the network, then, as most TV movies are, sold into syndication for telecast by individual local stations. It has been shown in most areas.

This week's best

Friday

Finally, something good is airing on a Friday night: NBC's movie is "New York, New York." A talented but self-centered womanizing saxophonist is helped on his way to stardom by an equally talented but more sentimental young singer, Robert DeNiro, Liza Minnelli and Mary Kay Place star.

Saturday

The CBS movie, "City on Fire" is about the best bet. After dismissal from an oil refinery, an employee takes revenge by sabotaging the plant, releasing dangerous combustible petroleum throughout the surrounding city. When fire breaks out it traps the terrified populace. Sounds like fun.

Sunday

If you don't want to commit to several nights of NBC's huge "Marco Polo" dramatic miniseries, try ABC's "Hollywood: The Gift of Laughter." Carol Burnett, Dom DeLuise, Jack Lemmon, Walter Matthau, Richard Pryor and Burt Reynolds host a three-hour salute to film comedy.

Monday

A hit-and-run death turns into a bizarre story for eager work reporter Lance, who keeps digging up more — and dangerous — details about the victim on CBS' "Lou Grant."

Tuesday

ABC offers "The Best of Three's Company" and CBS counters with the movie "Fallen Angel," a drama about a lonely and unloved 13-year-old who becomes involved in child pornography.

Wednesday

A pretty lousy night. The CBS late movie is "Orea," a film that's so unbelievable it's funny. A commercial fisherman harpoons and kills a whale, and its mate attempts revenge. And, yes, the movie was made right after "Jaws" was a big hit.

Thursday

Not bad for a Thursday. CBS offers a Lily Tomlin special, "Lily for President," with Ellen Barkin and James Coco while ABC offers an animated "Grinch" special, "The Grinch Grinches the Cat in the Hat."
